House Backs Bill to Ease Security Risk Dismissals

Passes 327 to 14; Effort to Provide Right of Appeal Defeated 193-144

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

A bill to give to the heads of 11 Federal agencies, with nearly a million employes, the right to fire any of them on security charges was approved yesterday by the House after a rough-and-tumble debate.

The vote on final passage was 327 to 14, and the bill was sent to the Senate. The controversy was over an amendment proposed by Representative George Miller (D., Calif.) to give employes fired under the bill the right of appeal to the Civil Service Commission.

The Miller amendment, backed by a bipartisan bloc, lost in committee by a vote of 102 to 96. It lost again, 193 to 144, on a motion by Representative Harold Hagan (R., Minn.) to send the bill back to the House Civil Service Committee with instructions to include the Miller rider in it.

Also voted down were amendments by Representatives Holifield (D., Calif.) and McCarthy (D., Minn.) to give additional protection to accused employes. Holifield proposed that an independent board be set up to hear the appeals of fired employes. The board would have final authority to order the reinstatement of fired employes. The McCarthy plan would permit appeals to the Civil Service Commission, and the commission, in turn, could give job preference in "nonsensitive" agencies to those it cleared.

Author Opposes Amendment

Representative Murray (D., Tenn.), the bill's author, charged the proposed amendment would weaken his measure. Representative Cox (D., Ga.) said it would be a policy of appeasement to vote for the amendments. Representative Kilday (D., Tex.) said any appeal to Civil Service would be a roadblock, and besides, he added, the supervisor who makes the charge is "tried" under Civil Service appeal proceedings instead of the accused employe.

The House voted amendments by Representative Brown (R., Ohio) and by Representative Lucas (D., Tex.) to give the Commerce Secretary and the Attorney General, respectively, security firing authority over their em-

Report of Sinking Of Valley Forge Exploded by Navy

The Navy last night said there is nothing to rumors that the aircraft carrier Valley Forge has been torpedoed in Korean waters.

Capt. Walter Karig, a spokesman for the Navy Department, said contact had been made with the ship after reports that the vessel had been hit.

"I checked position and heading at 7 p. m. (EDT) and at that time I knew where she was heading and she was not going down," Karig said.

Asked if the ship had been torpedoed or otherwise damaged in any way, the Navy officer said:

"I am authorized to deny that, too."

Capital Seeks $290,000 For Defense

President Truman asked Congress yesterday to appropriate $290,000 to plan and put into effect a civil defense setup for the District.

Three months ago the Commissioners talked before Congress in terms of a $30,000 civil defense fund.

The preparedness item was carried in the $77.8 million first supplement bill, which also included $12,750,000 to provide additional modern quarters for 842 men and a 200-bed hospital addition at Soldiers Home here.

Trust Fund to Finance It

The President's request for a start on the long-proposed Soldiers Home building program would be financed out of the home's 30 million dollar trust fund. The request would merely authorize tapping the permanent fund.

The new barracks, it was learned, are being planned as a bombproof structure.

Maj. Gen. Howard K. Loughry (ret.), United States Army, governor of Soldiers Home, refused to comment on this feature. He would only say "It will be a very modern building, looking somewhat like the Statler Hotel."

FEPC Killed By New Defeat Of Debate Gag

Cloture Motion Gets Only 55-to-33 Vote, 9 Less Than Needed

The Administration's key civil rights bill, on compulsory fair employment practices, was killed in the Senate yesterday.

The legislation was buried for the session by coalition defeat of a debate-limiting cloture motion, designed to break a Southern filibuster before it started.

The motion mustered only a 55-to-33 majority, nine votes short of the 64 needed to register a "constitutional" two-thirds of the Senate.

No Votes Switched

It was the Administration's second attempt of the session to break through solid Southern opposition, and leaders said it would be obviously "futile" to make another.

The first effort last May fell 12 votes shy of the 64 needed for cloture. Yesterday's try showed a three-vote net gain from Senators absent the first time, but there wasn't a single "switch."

Voting to limit debate were 22 Democrats and 33 Republicans. Six Republicans joined Democrats against cloture.

Of the Senators in this area, Harry F. Byrd and A. Willis Robertson of Virginia voted against cloture and Millard E. Tydings of Maryland voted for it. Senator Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland, who voted for cloture last May, was absent.

Graham Opposes Cloture

Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), renominated over Gov. J. Strom Thurmond on Tuesday, hurried back to Washington to vote "no." A surprise vote against cloture was cast by Senator Frank P. Graham (D., N. C.), recently defeated for renomination by North Carolina's Willis Smith. Graham declined to say how he would vote during his recent primary campaign.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), although still convalescing from a serious lung operation, showed up to vote for cloture.

With FEPC's defeat a foregone conclusion since the first showdown last May, yesterday's vote

Curbs Urged On Civilian Production

Some of Closest Truman Advisers Ask Early Cuts to Speed War Goods

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

One of President Truman's next big decisions will be whether to ask industry to cut down the production of television sets, private cars and perhaps other civilian products.

Some of the President's closest and most trusted advisers, it was learned yesterday, have swung around sharply to the belief that a quick curtailment is needed to speed the output of war materials.

Until last weekend these civilian officials had supposed that the American economy could go ahead on a basis of business-as-usual, on the assumption that the war in Korea would be relatively short and easy.

But pessimistic reports from the Far East last Sunday, and emerging danger signs in other parts of the world, have made a dramatic change in such assumptions.

Emphatic in Argument

Today an important part of the President's official family argues emphatically, almost passionately, that the United States and the entire free world will be in serious danger unless the civilians of this country forego a few accustomed pleasures.

In the first five months of this year the television industry, for example, turned out 2,592,000 sets, almost as many as it made in all of last year. The President is being told that a reduction of this gigantic output would mean more radar equipment for the armed forces in Korea and elsewhere.

Likewise, the grim news from Korea is being used as evidence that more tanks and trucks are needed from the automobile industry. The industry produced seven million private cars last year, and is still booming.

Legal experts have told the President already he does not need new powers from Congress to cut down the output of certain civilian products.

Law Gives Power, Priority

Section 18 of the Selective Service Act of 1948, recently extended until next July, provides that the President can "at any time place an order with any plant or mine for any article or material which the armed forces or the Atomic Energy Commission may require."

"It thereupon becomes the duty of the person receiving such an order," the act goes on to say, "to give it priority over all other orders. . . ."

If the manufacturer fails to give such priority, the act authorizes the President to seize his plant and pay "fair and just compensation." If he is willing to switch to war production, but haggles over the price, he must fill the defense order anyway, with the assurance of compensation.

The substance of this act was in effect during two world wars, and would enable President Truman to do virtually everything which his impatient and worried advisers think necessary now.

Would Consult Congress

Probably the President would consult with congressional leaders before putting such powers into effect, just as he did before he ordered the use of American armed forces in Korea. But, according to legal experts, there is no constitutional or legislative reason for him to do so; he is free to act quickly if he decides to do so.

The Council of Economic Advisers has not yet finally completed its long-awaited report on the im-

Nuclear TVA May Be Result Of Bomb Work, Scientist Says

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Charlottesville, Va., July 12.—Atomic power for the public will be an "inevitable" although long-term by-product of the military need for nuclear weapons and engines, one of the Atomic Energy Commission's top researchers declared tonight.

Speaking to the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs, Dr. Alvin M. Weinberg argued that it would probably be through military and defense atomic projects that atom-generated power for peaceful purposes would be brought into existence.

One of America's top scientists urged tonight that the Government go slow in mobilizing scientific experts for current military needs.

Such an attempt will do more harm than good, even from a military point of view, Dr. Louis N. Ridenour told the Institute.

Ridenour, dean of the University of Illinois' graduate studies department and a principal figure in wartime radar development, warned that the exploitation of

U. S. Retains Freedom to Use A-Bombs

Secretary Cautions Reds of Seriousness Of New Aggression Any Place in World

Secretary Acheson yesterday delivered two thinly veiled warnings to the Soviet world.

The first was prompted by a question at his press conference about the reported massing of Bulgarian tanks along the Yugoslav border. The Secretary said he would not comment on reports and rumors he could not vouch for.

But, he added with grim emphasis, it must be obvious to anyone that any further aggression at this time, anywhere in the world, would be a matter of the utmost seriousness.

This was as near as he could come to telling the Russians and their Balkan satellites that an attack on Marshal Tito's country would be answered here, and in other free countries as an act of aggression, just as the attack on South Korea.

Keep Freedom to Use A-Bomb

The Secretary's other warning was a formal statement which indicated, although not in so many words, that the United States would keep its freedom of action to use the atomic bomb if necessary.

It showed for the first time why the State Department has been so bothered by the so-called Stockholm "peace petition," for which the Russians now claim 100 million signatures, most of them in the Soviet Union.

For this document not only calls for outlawing atomic weapons, but brands as a war criminal the nation which first uses the atomic bomb for any reason.

Acheson described this as "an utterly cynical begging of the question."

Real Crime Is Aggression

"The real crime against humanity," he said, "is aggression, and, in particular, the deliberate resort to armed aggression in defiance of the United Nations.

"The war criminals are the people who sanction such action. The weapons used are quite incidental to the crime. Thus the Communists throughout the world have given the lie to the Stockholm proposal in their support of armed aggression."

The Acheson statement said that the Communist "peace petition" did two things:

1. In seeking to outlaw the atomic bomb, it tried to "promote the unenforceable Soviet proposals concerning atomic energy, ignoring the effective control plan approved by the overwhelming majority of the United Nations and opposed by the Soviet Union and four of its satellites; and

2. In branding the user of an atomic bomb as a war criminal, it was "ignoring the aggression in

Services Tighten Security Rules on Troops, Supplies

By The Associated Press

The Army and Navy yesterday said they have sent out orders for tighter security on information about the movement of troops and supplies.

The announcement came after protests were voiced in Congress that too much is being told about steps to build up American strength in Korea.

The Navy said it has sent district commanders the following guidance points on information:

1. "No effort or attempt will be made to conceal preparations for movements of troops or ships which are self-evident. However, data and statistics concerning the numbers of personnel or equipment, prospective sailing dates, names of units embarked for destinations will not be disclosed."

2. "Information concerning ship movements from the West Coast may be made available after the departure of the ships. Information concerning ship movements west of Hawaii will not be released."

3. "Photographs of loadings, sailings and reactivation operations will be permitted with normal restrictions of the Navy (that is, the same restrictions that have always been in effect)."

The Army said that instructions similar to those of the Navy had been sent to all Army commands in the United States.

Second Draft, Partial Guard Mobilization Are Forecast

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Still further expansion of the Nation's armed forces to meet the increasingly serious situation in Korea is planned by Pentagon chiefs, The Washington Post was informed last night.

This word came as Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) of the Senate Military Appropriations subcommittee said that the Department of Defense will ask Congress "for a billion dollars or more next week" to meet costs of the fighting in Korea.

He also said Secretary Louis Johnson had disclosed that steps are being taken to speed the placing of orders for new warplanes with funds already available. This apparently referred to some 600 million dollars in aircraft funds voted by Congress but impounded under the Defense economy program.

Authoritative sources predicted the following additional steps will be ordered within the next few days:

1. A second draft call of substantially greater size than the 20,000-man first call. Best estimates available are that it will aggregate about 80,000 men—or 100,000 in all. Local selective service boards will be asked to have them in uniforms by late October.

2. Shipment of additional Regular Army forces from the United States to the Far East. They would be in addition to the Second Infantry Division and other units alerted for overseas several days ago, and probably will include another division at least.

Call Some Guard Units

(3) Transfer of trained personnel from other Regular Army units remaining in the United States to forces shipped overseas to bring them up to full strength.

(4) Call up some National Guard units—perhaps a couple of divisions—to replace the Regular Army divisions taken from the homeland "mobile reserve."

(5) Reopening of one or two of

Snyder Cites Korean Crisis

Excise Tax Cut Bill Shelved At Administration Request

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Administration yesterday pulled the rug out from under the billion-dollar excise tax cut bill in the face of climbing war costs.

A request from Treasury Secretary John Snyder that the measure be laid aside in the light of Korean developments apparently killed the bill for the session.

A closed-door session of the Senate Finance Committee in effect shelved the bill indefinitely, with the thin possibility it could be revived if the Korean war takes a sharp turn in our favor.

"In my opinion the bill is dead," Senator Harry Flood Byrd (D., Va.) told newsmen following the committee meeting.

"I will support Secretary Snyder's decision that in view of the international situation the bill should be laid aside."

Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) declined formal comment on early reports of Snyder's request, saying only the bill will be laid aside once

New Pounding Drives Stocks To 1950 Low

Sink $1 to $4 in One of Worst Breaks Since Korea War

New York, July 12 (AP).—The stock market plunged to a new 1950 low today in one of the worst breaks since intervention in Korea.

Jittery traders dumped stock on the market in two waves of selling. Key issues were pounded down $1 to around $4 a share.

Nearly 300 issues sold at new lows for 1950 during the day. Closing prices were at or near the lows of the session.

Sales crossed the three-million-share mark for the second day in a row. Turnover of 3,200,000 shares compared with 3,250,000 Tuesday.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks cracked 1.6 to 70.8, a bottom since December 21 last year. Three weeks ago the market was cruising around a four-year peak.

The rail group did fairly well but industrials and utilities, on average, took a bad pounding.

Korea continued to dominate trading psychology—not because of what has happened but because of what might happen.

Motors, steels, utilities and radio-televisions were among the heaviest traded shares and many took a bad beating. Few other groups, though, escaped the lash of sell orders.

General Motors broke 4¼ to 79¼, Chrysler 2⅞ to 64 and Studebaker 1¼ to 26⅛.

Steels did comparatively well. Off only fractions were U. S. Steel at 32⅜ and Bethlehem at 37. More than a point lower were Republic at 34 and Youngstown Sheet at 84¼.

Radio Corp., the most active issue, lost ¾ at 14⅞. Emerson was down the same amount at 12⅞. Down around two each were Admiral at 20¾ and Zenith at 41⅝.

New Line Formed As Gallant Rear Guard Holds Until River Is Crossed

BULLETIN

Tokyo (Thursday), July 13 (AP).—American planes destroyed 38 North Korean tanks in 229 sorties in the close-in battlefront area, General MacArthur announced today.

They also destroyed many trucks, trains, half-tracks and other vehicles, the communique said.

With American forces in Korea (Thursday), July 13.—The highway bridge over the Kum River was blown up by American troops early this morning. For the first time in a week American soldiers rested in comparatively secure positions, with no immediate worry that North Korean Communists would overrun their flank.

Nearly 600 tons of dynamite were used to blow a ninety-foot gap in the low concrete causeway. For once, a demolition was successful. The enemy will now have to ferry his tanks across the Kum, and since the Americans have rounded up all the ferry boats, the Communists will have to make barges.

No one knows how long the Kum line will hold. It could be a formidable position if American reinforcements arrive in time. If too thinly held, the Reds might crack through in four or five days.

Tokyo (Thursday), July 13.—Outnumbered and outgunned American troops, hammered back south of the Kum River, braced today for the next North Korean tank-led assault. Front line reports said the Americans were "well placed" in new defense positions of their own choosing.

A gallant rearguard action slowed the Communist offensive until the Americans made their way across the last river barrier before Taejon in a daylight retreat, described as "efficiently" carried out. The Kum is only 13 miles north of Taejon, South Korea's temporary capital.

Reports from United States headquarters in Korea said the North Korean advance had left the Reds vulnerable to a punch in the side from South Korean forces holding the eastern sector of the main front.

The South Koreans were well north of the deepest Communist Tokyo (Thursday), July 13 (AP), Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the United States Eighth Army in Japan, has assumed command of ground forces in Korea, it was announced today.

A general headquarters communique added that an Eighth Army advance command post has been set up in Korea.

'Clean It Up' Fast, Gen. Cates Tells Force of Marines

San Diego, Calif., July 12 (U.P.).—Gen. Clifton B. Cates, commandant of the United States Marine Corps, walked among battle-bound leathernecks here today and told them what to do in Korea.

"You boys clean this up in a couple of months," ordered Cates, "or I'll be over to see you."

Officers and enlisted men boarding transports for the trip to war were surprised to find the tough commandant strolling among their units.

Approximately 7000 Marines of the crack First Marine Division were going aboard transports with combat equipment, including light tanks. It appeared they would cast off Thursday night or Friday for the Korean battle area.

'Hill' Speeches Urge Warlike Measures

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Immediate mobilization of all National Guard units and paid Reserves, severance of relations with Russia and her satellites and an atomic bomb ultimatum to North Korea were proposed yesterday in a series of House and Senate speeches.

Reflecting mounting congressional tension and even alarm over South Korean reverses, each proposal was made separately by individual members, without any appearance of Administration sanction.

There were indications, however, that one or more of the proposals may at least reach the ear of the President.

An unidentified group of Senators discussed a possible formal request that President Truman seek a diplomatic showdown with Russia on ending the war in Korea.

Direct Talk With Russia

A Democratic official, who asked not to be named, said several Senators were pressing for the direct talk with Russia. Some favored formal notice to Russia that we will have to use the atomic weapon within a stated period if such an agreement is not forthcoming, this official said.

During yesterday's outbreak of Korean speeches on both sides of the Capitol:

1. Representative Lloyd M. Bentsen, jr. (D., Tex.), a lieutenant colonel in command of a bomber squadron in World War II, urged the President to give the North Koreans one week to withdraw beyond the 38th parallel, or face atomic consequences. Bentsen's speech received a round of House applause.

2. Senator Lyndon B. Johnson (D., Tex.), one of the best-informed members of the Senate Armed Services Committee, called for mobilization of 832,028 members of National Guard units and paid Reservists at once, emergency authority for full industrial mobilization, use of priorities for war materials and other "all out" steps to win the war. Said Johnson: "I sincerely believe that never before during my experience has the Nation been in such grave peril."

McCarran Would Sever Relations

3. Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) called on the Government to immediately sever diplomatic relations with the Soviet and all of her satellites in "a last effort to salvage our moral leadership of the world and to avoid the terrible consequences of World War II." In "self preservation" he said the United States should "quarantine" the Red powers.

4. Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), ranking minority member of the Armed Services Committee, issued a statement urging the Defense Department to "put an end to public disclosures of the intention to move troops and materiel." Bridges said that while he abhored censorship, this step is "a measure of elementary security." He also asked the American press and radio to "exercise such voluntary restraint as may be necessary to insure elementary security."

Senator Johnson laid down a 7-point "minimum program" to meet Red aggression after criticizing executive cuts in the authorized strength of our armed forces and air power.

"I did not intend—and I know Congress did not intend—that the knife which trimmed the fat should also cut the muscle," Johnson said. "We must recognize and admit that somewhere the knife slipped."

The Texan entitled his speech, "Delay—Defeat—Retreat."

Lists Increased Personnel

He said his proposal to call up all National Guard units and all Reserves now on a drill pay basis would bring into the armed forces the following personnel:

Army—180,570 Reservists and 332,138 National Guardsmen; Air Force—51,165 Reservists and 44,925 National Guardsmen; Navy—183,859 Reservists; Marine Corps—39,371 Reserves; total—832,028 men.

In addition, Johnson said these other steps are essential:

1. Authorize the armed forces to accept volunteers from the nonpaid reserves.

2. Order all unpaid reservists into active service "as necessity dictates." This would add 1,700,000 reservists.

3. Direct the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps to organize all units on a combat basis.

Emergency Legislation

4. Enact emergency legislation necessary to care properly for those reservists and civilians who are inducted or ordered into service.

5. Make the "fullest possible" use of the present provision in the Selective Service Act enabling the Government to place priority orders for all materiel essential for the armed forces.

Across the Capitol, Representative Bentsen was applauded by Republicans and Democrats alike when he called for an atomic ultimatum to North Korea.

"My suggestion may result in my being labeled an alarmist or extremist," Bentsen said, "but if it should result in an earlier end to this warfare and the saving of American lives, as I believe it will, then I shall not mind labels.

"Why not do it now rather than six months from now wishing we had done it . . . ?"

He said the United States should serve notice now "that the atomic bomb awaits those who would violate the peace of free men."

In a variation of the proposal, Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) urged President Truman give General MacArthur "full discretion to use whatever weapons we have, including the atomic bomb." Brewster said the authority alone would deter Red volunteers from outside Korea joining the invasion.

Former Army Undersecretary Tracy S. Voorhees meanwhile told a House committee an atomic attack on United States industrial cities and the Atlantic Coast is "now more than a possibility."

Voorhees said he has not lost hope that an atomic attack on the United States could be prevented but we must be prepared. If such an attack comes he said it would be a big one designed "to knock out our Nation's industrial retaliatory potential."

Landing by 'Chinese' Reported

Baltimore, July 12 (AP). — The Sunpapers' Philip Potter radioed from Korea that a division of enemy troops tentatively identified as "Chinese" Communists landed yesterday below American lines on the east coast.

The correspondent qualified the identification. He also pointed out it has been officially established: 1. North Korean troops killed in an air raid last week were wearing Chinese Communist uniforms. 2. At least one division of North Koreans formerly operated with the Communists in Manchuria.

(In Washington, a Pentagon briefing officer said he would "personally discount" any report that a Chinese Communist division has landed below American lines.

(He said it was "quite possible" that small boats had landed agents on the coast, but he was "confident no combat units have been landed.")

Other Nations Weigh Offers Of Armed Help, Acheson Says

Other countries are "considering making offers" of military help in Korea in addition to the six that have already contributed forces, Secretary Acheson said yesterday.

United Nations machinery has not yet been set up to deal with the offers of help, Acheson said, but he expected it to be set up "in the very near future."

"In the meantime," he said, "naval and air contingents from Australia, New Zealand and the United Kingdom are already operating under the unified command, and contributions from Canada and the Netherlands will be arriving shortly.

"Mand states have indicated a desire to assist but do not know what types of assistance within their capabilities would be useful. Advantage will be taken of those offers as soon as channels are set up."

He said the Canadian and Dutch help would take the form of naval forces; "other asisstance, chiefly economic," has been offered by Thailand, Norway, Denmark, Chile, the Philippines and Nicaragua.

Acheson told his press conference that 56 out of the 59 members of the U. N. had replied to the Security Council resolution of June 27 calling for help to South Korea. Three of the 56, the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia and Poland, have rejected the appeal.

Britain Seeks to Avoid Korea Ground Fighting

London, July 12 (AP).—Government sources today reported Britain will try to stay out of the ground fighting in Korea as long as she can.

The government's view was said to be that Britain already is making a big contribution to Western security in the Far East by holding the Malayan and Hongkong sectors of the Western line in Asia.

Britain, they said, has neither offered nor been asked by the United States to send ground forces to Korea.

The government's policy would of course be reviewed if an American SOS did come along.

This information came after Defense Minister Emmanuel Shinwell told Commons three times this afternoon that the Korean situation had produced a state of "grave anxiety."

Shinwell told questioners Britain, because of world tension, is both building up its armed forces and rearming them as quickly as possible.

He said he was not "complacent" about what has been achieved and added: "There is still a great deal to be done."

American leaders were said to understand this country's military resources already are overstrained by her commitments in the rich Malayan Federation (where it is fighting a Red-led resistance movement) and in strategic Hongkong (where a 40,000-strong garrison is being maintained off the mainland of Red China.)

Airmen Report 5-Inch Rockets Bounce Off '60-Ton' Red Tanks

At an Air Base in Japan, July 12 (U.P.) — Fifth Air Force pilots bombed and strafed North Korean medium tanks and vehicles in widespread, punishing raids today, but complained that their five-inch rockets hardly dented what appeared to be 60-ton, Soviet-built tanks.

The Australian air force announced that it had had a "bumper" day in extensive Mustang fighter attacks on the Communists. A communique issued in Tokyo said the pilots knocked out eight tanks, the largest kill for the Australians on any day.

United States Air Force pilots returning from what appeared to be a near-maximum effort reported another good day in clear weather. F-80 Shooting Stars still were returning to this base after sunset, so many of them had gone out. They parked along ramps and taxi strips, where ground crews were to work on them all night so they could take off at daybreak again Thursday.

Today's strafing and rocket-firing attacks were concentrated against Communist forces along the highway northward from Chochiwon, which was captured by the North Koreans today.

Maj. Charles Williams, 30, of San Antonio, Tex., a squadron leader, said he got one tank shortly before dark.

"The joker was trying to hide against a bank and I wheeled around and put a burst of about 600 rounds in him," Williams said.

He added that his rockets only glanced off the big tanks. Sometimes with luck, he said, a flier can make rockets bounce off the ground, strike the tanks underneath in their fuel tanks and kill them off.

The Reds are good at camouflage, Williams said, and sometimes it is difficult to see their tanks in areas near trees.

Williams is married and has a son who will celebrate his first birthday Thursday. His wife and child live at another base in Japan.

Hit One Big Tank

Lieut. George Pringle, 26, Clinton, Iowa, who was in Williams' flight, said he hit one of the big tanks, but it did no good.

"I used up just about all my ammunition on him," Pringle said.

The Shooting Stars now are getting more time in the target area. Outsize wingtip tanks are being used to enable them to carry nearly 200 more gallons of fuel than previously. It is also considered certain that the amount of armaments they carry is being increased gradually.

The Australian communique said Mustang fighter pilots now operating in the battle area and behind North Korean lines had a "field day." In addition to the eight tanks, they bagged five trucks, a truck towing a field gun and struck at various targets of opportunity.

The Australian fighters took off from their home base early in the morning, landed at a South Korean base to refuel and rearm and returned this afternoon.

Four of the pilots told how a little United States Army ground-control plane led them to six tanks beside a road. The Australians gave the works to the tanks, which were being refueled.

"The mob of us let go with rockets and blanketed them," said Flight Lieut. Tom Murphy, Victoria. "There was a lot of flame about, but we could see our rockets ploughing into the target and we noticed heavy fuel fires after we turned away."

The squadron had no casualties or damage and all the fliers returned with praise for United States Army ground-control teams, which spot targets and guide aircraft to them.

Mother of Quads At Age 17 Bears Quintuplets at 21

Williamston, N. C., July 12 (U.P.). A 21-year-old girl who bore quadruplets when she was 17 gave birth to quintuplets today but all died within a few minutes.

The first child was born to Mrs. Viola Rogers Brown at 12:40 a. m., and the last at 1:50 a. m. Three were boys and two were girls. Their weights ranged from one to one and a half pounds.

The quadruplets also did not live more than a few minutes, doctors reported. The woman and her husband, sawmill worker Alonzo Brown, have one 19-month-old son living.

Doctors said the quints were three months premature.

penetration to the Kum in the American sector and the Reds did not have heavy armor there, Associated Press Correspondent William R. Moore reported from field headquarters.

But a short time later, a spokesman at field headquarters told AP Correspondent Tom Lambert the North Koreans were moving eastward in "considerable numbers." Lambert said this might indicate the Reds were trying to beat the South Koreans to the punch.

Dispatches did not pinpoint the spot where the Americans fell back across the Kum but it appeared to be somewhere south of Chochiwon. The Americans were driven from that city eight miles north of the river earlier Wednesday.

Neither did the dispatches locate the new American positions. Moore reported, however, they were "where a growing concentration of American troops and weapons can be used to best advantage."

There was no mention of casualties in the retreat but the Red radio at Pyongyang said 700 Americans were killed and 200 captured during the North Korean breakthrough south of Chochiwon. The Red radio did not give the time covered in the casualty count. Although field dispatches hinted that casualties might be high there was nothing to confirm the Communist radio claim.

A spokesman at advanced American headquarters in Korea announced the retirement across the Kum River, which he described as the "toughest kind of military operation," carried out over two days in the face of overwhelming numbers of North Korean troops and armor.

The Communists moved through a fog earlier Wednesday to capture Chochiwon, only 22 miles by air northwest of Taejon. United States troops fought a game-delaying action before withdrawing in the face of overwhelming odds. Another Red column headed down the road to Konju on the Kum River.

Headquarters sources said the situation was so fluid that American defense towns along the battleline could not be pinpointed.

About the only bright spot in the picture was a report from advance American headquarters that air strikes had "isolated" the front line Communists from their supply bases. The airmen had attacked the main supply road behind Red lines into an avenue of wreckage—smashed and burning vehicles, blasted bridges and bomb-pocked road surfaces.

Only four United States battalions—perhaps 1600 or more men—were north of the Kum, which provides a natural obstacle to tanks. The Americans were fighting to delay the advance of three North Korean divisions—possibly 18,000 men—crunching relentlessly south for the river line with tanks leading the way.

Near exhaustion, one grimy, bloodshot-eyed American officer bitterly complained "you don't fight two tank equipped divisions with .30 caliber carbines."

MacArthur's communique said that enemy forces had engaged American units six miles north of Chochiwon where a bloody encounter to delay the Communist advance was fought across the main highway. There was no mention of casualties.

Field dispatches from Associated Press correspondent Tom Lambert described one American unit being shoved off a hillside and crossing an unidentified river (probably the Miho River) in the Chochiwon area under sniper and machine-gun fire.

The dispatch said the big Russian-built tanks looked like replicas of the formidable German Tiger tank of World War II.

(In Washington the Defense Department has received no official confirmation that the North Koreans were using heavier Russian tanks than the 30-ton T-34 with a top speed of 34 miles an hour. The Russians have 50-ton front line tanks called the Joseph Stalin III, protected by more than six inches of armor plate and mounting 122-millimeter guns.)

Air Attacks Cut Artillery Fire

Allied air strikes were making themselves felt in attacks behind the North Korean front lines. The American advanced headquarters spokesman in South Korea said the air pounding was slowing up Red artillery fire.

The North Korean drive, however, seemed to have enough momentum to carry forward with heavy pressure on both the American sector and the South Korean forces to the east.

General MacArthur's communique said the South Koreans had made a planned withdrawal from the Chongju-Umsong sector to better defensive positions along the Pogang River.

Chongju, 24 miles northeast of Taejon is not to be confused with Chungju, some 52 miles northeast of Taejon.

Chungju now is held by the North Korean Fifth Division with elements of the newly identified Fifteenth North Korean Division moving east to reinforce them. Fighting in this hilly area was said be favorable to the defenders.

Still farther east an unidentified North Korean force at Tanyang was attempting to cross the Han river and smash the South Korean Eighth Division which has dug in along the south bank of the Han River.

The enemy apparently was gathering strength in this central sector for a southern drive to cut across the main American supply line between Taegu and Taejon, the threatened American key position south of the Kum River.

Taegu is a rail and road center through which flows the American supplies landed at Pusan from Japan.

General MacArthur said that units of Fifth North Korean Division were probing south of Shungju toward a vital highway which crosses the American supply line at Kumchon. South Korean forces of the Sixth Division were defending the highway.

No major developments were reported along the east coast of South Korea. Allied naval guns harassed small enemy forces which have been moving southward along this coast toward Pusan.

Allied warships cruised northward to Yangyang, just north of the thirty-eighty parallel, to carry out dawn bombardments in the enemy's home territory.

The midnight communique did not specify results from air strikes, but field dispatches indicated that allied planes again were out in numbers and striking hard.

B-29s, which now are called medium bombers, hit warehouses, marshallisg yards and rolling stock, with the targets left crackling in flames.

Collins, Vandenberg In Tokyo for Parleys

Tokyo, Thursday, July 13 (U.P.). United States Army and Air Force Chiefs of Staff arrived today for a top strategy conference with Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, and Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, commanding general of the Air Force, landed at Haneda airport shortly before 7 a. m. (5 p. m. EDT Wednesday).

Collins told reporters that he and Vandenberg would be here only a day and a half and would confer with MacArthur only on the Korean war. When asked if they would go to Korea, he said "our plans have not firmed up yet."

The Navy announced that Admiral Arthur W. Radford, Commander in Chief of the Pacific fleet, left Pearl Harbor yesterday for conferences with MacArthur.

Reds Warned On Yugoslavia

other forms presently being practiced by the Communists."

"Basic Hypocrisy" of "Appeal"

Acheson explained that the petition was adopted last March at a meeting of the "Partisans of Peace," an international organization established by the Communists.

"Just before the North Korean armed forces launched their unprovoked attack against the Republic of Korea," he recalled, "more than half the population of North Korea was reported to have signed the pietition. This illustrates better than anything else the basic hypocrisy of the Communist 'peace appeal.'"

The Secretary also took occasion yesterday to dispute another favorite theme of Communist propaganda in the past two weeks. This is the story, widely believed in the United States, that the South Korean army was routed because its men did not have as much enthusiasm for their cause as the Communists did.

Acheson said he did not share that view at all. He told a questioner that the South Korean troops and people had come to the support of their government with extraordinary unity and determination.

There has been no defection on the South Korean side, he said; the South Koreans have put up a good performance. They were lightly armed and of course were broken up as a result, but he did not think any Americans should criticize their performance on that score.

Yugoslavs Charge Bulgarians With Warlike Move to Border

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, July 12 (U.P.).—Motorized Bulgarian army units in battle array are proceeding toward the Yugoslav frontier, the official news agency Tanjug said today.

The agency said Romania and Hungary also were taking emergency measures in their border areas.

The charges against Premier Marshal Tito's three Cominform neighbors came less than 24 hours after Yugoslavia banned all travel to frontier and Hungary created a virtual state of emergency in her border region.

The agency quoted the Communist organ Barba as saying the Cominform was "whipping up a war psychosis" among the Bulgarian, Romanian and Hungarian people.

"Bulgarian motorized units are moving about in Sofia and are heading toward the western (Yugoslav) frontier, complete from guns to medical equipment and supply columns," Tanjug said.

"A curfew has been introduced in the Romanian frontier zone facing Yugoslavia. In Hungary, a real crusade has been started against members of the Yugoslav minority. Arrests, maltreatment and forcible displacements of not only of individuals and families but of whole villages and regions are being carried out."

Reds Claim U. S. Arms 'Pour Into Yugoslavia'

Belgrade, July 12 (NYHT.).—There has been an intensification of Russian propaganda in the last 10 days that American arms are pouring into Yugoslavia and that American engineers are constructing military airdromes in this country for an attack on Russia.

A Budapest broadcast a few days ago said that American equipment, including tanks, is being shipped to Premier Marshal Tito from Austria at a fast rate. Practically the entire Cominform radio network is playing on this theme in nightly broadcasts. The Sofia radio charged again tonight that Yugoslavia is being converted into a major American military and air base.

Since such allegations could serve as a pretext for military action by the Soviet Union or its satellites against the Tito's heretical Communist regime. they have caused anxiety here in Western circles.

It is understood that no major embassy here believes the Soviet Union intends to attack Yugoslavia with its own forces at present. Nor has any embassy, so far as is known, informed its government that movements in Bulgaria and Romania are assuming large enough proportions to indicate an attack by the satellites.

Reports of Red German Police Moves Increase

Berlin, July 12 (AP).—Reports multiplied in Berlin today that detachments of East German police troopers in new field gray uniforms are being shipped to mysterious destinations.

A senior United States intelligence officer said he believed that if the units are being sent out of Germany their missions is to some Communist pressure point in southeast Europe such as the Yugoslav border.

He did not exclude the possibility that the police are being dispatched to Korea.

The Berlin anti-Communist press has been reporting east German police would be used in "international brigades" being formed for intervention in Korea.

Canadian Destroyers Off for Korea Defense

Ottawa, July 12 (AP).—External Affairs Minister L. B. Pearson said today three Canadian destroyers probably will leave Pearl Harbor for Korea within the next 48 hours. He stressed that they will be used only for the defense of South Korea.

He told a press conference they are being placed under the command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur as United Nations commander.

Pearson said the destroyers will shell Northern Korean defenses and will tackle Northern forces in the Korean area if ordered.

The Deadliest SIN

by W. AVERELL HARRIMAN
U.S. Special Representative in Europe

"The only deadly sin I know is cynicism."
—HENRY L. STIMSON

These are the closing words of Secretary Stimson's book, "On Active Service", ending a vigorous statement of his faith in mankind and in human progress. To me, there is nothing more vitally needed in the world today than this faith.

We Americans belive in the freedom of men to think for themselves. We believe in governments by majority will. We want to live at peace, with freedom and justice for everybody.

But today a powerful and aggressive force is loose in the world, determined to extinguish both freedom and justice.

I have had long and intimate contact with the Kremlin. From my observations it is apparent that the basic difference between its viewpoint and the democratic viewpoint comes down to this: the Soviet leaders do not trust people, we do.

Cynical of men's worth, they hold that the few should be allowed to dictate to the many. Having faith in mankind, we say, let the majority rule. Men at liberty to decide for themselves, Americans believe, will ultimately choose what is right.

The difference in viewpoints shows up in our contrasting attitudes toward other nations. The Soviets trust only satellite governments taking orders from Moscow. We believe that wherever the will of the people governs we have friends.

In the struggle ahead, remember that history is on our side. The Kremlin proclaims "the inevitability of the dictatorship of the proletariat." But history does not teach the inevitability of tyranny. It teaches just the opposite.

The whole steam of human development has been a successful struggle of mankind for ever-growing freedom. Dictatorships have been overthrown by the strongest of all human forces—man's passionate desire for liberty.

Mr. Stimson was aware of these things when he wrote of the generations succeeding his:

"Let them have hope, and virtue, and let them believe in mankind and its future, for there is good as well as evil, and the man who tries to work for the good, believing in its eventual victory, while he may suffer setback and even disaster, will never know defeat." (from The New York Herald Tribune)

U. S. Awaits Details Of Red-British Talks

Reports reaching Washington threw no light yesterday on what the Russians might have in mind in continuing their talks with Sir David Kelly, the British Ambassador in Moscow.

Secretary Acheson said yesterday that the British government was keeping him informed about the talks, but he declined at his press conference to comment on them.

One informed source said the issue of Chinese representation in the United Nations had not been raised in the Anglo-Soviet discussions—not, at least, on the basis of any reports received here.

Although the Moscow talks are being watched closely in Washington, there has been no direct evidence so far that the Russians are seeking to limit the Korean war or to call it off in exchange for concessions. A clearer picture of Soviet intentions is not expected as long as Communist troops are advancing in South Korea.

In the meantime, officials here do not at all disapprove the action of the British in keeping at least one channel of communication open with Moscow.

French Envoy Talks With Kelly at Moscow

Moscow, July 12 (AP).—The French Ambassador to Moscow, Yves Chataigneau, and his counsellor conferred at length today at the British Embassy.

The talk is reported to have concerned the Korean situation, and to have touched on the visit yesterday of British Ambassador Sir David Kelly to deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

(The British foreign office said last night the Kelly-Gromyko talk concerned Britain's request to Russia to cooperate in bringing about a peaceful solution in Korea).

A full account of that meeting is now in the hands of the London foreign office.

Czechs Stiffen Laws On Treason, Espionage

Prague, July 12 (AP).—The National Assembly of Czechoslovakia today unanimously passed a new law code setting up stiff penalties for treason, spying and sabotage.

The law provides lesser punishments for such things as spreading scare rumors, using religion to influence politics and leaving the country without permission. It has been in preparation since October 1, 1948.

Quit Union or Job, Mobile Police Told

Mobile, Ala., July 12 (AP).—The Mobile City Commission today ordered newly unionized members of the Police Department to get out of the labor union by next Monday or be fired.

The commission announced adoption of an ordinance prohibiting city policemen and firemen from "being or becoming" members of any labor union.

'Revolts' Reported

Advance Near Pusan, Soviet Journal Says

Moscow, July 12 (AP).—Russian correspondents today claimed that North Korean forces have advanced almost to Pusan, the main American supply point on the southeast coast of Korea.

(General MacArthur has reported several amphibious landings by the Communist invaders on the east coast of South Korea, including one attempt last week at Pohang, 80 miles north of Pusan, but there has been no official word from U. S. forces of any serious threat to the supply port.)

The Literary Gazette published the report in a dispatch from its correspondents in Pyongyang, North Korea.

The dispatch said North Korean naval landing parties had been put ashore in force along the eastern coast and had advanced "almost to Pusan itself."

The dispatch also claimed revolts had broken out in the "most southern extremity" of the Korean peninsula.

The Gazette said the battle line July 10 started south of Chonan on the Yellow Sea, ran across the Chkhyaryengsan Mountains (Apparently one of the several small mountain ranges between Chonan and Chungju) and south of Chunchzhu (presumably Chungju) and reached the Sea of Japan at a point between Yongdok and Pohang.

(The line claimed by the Gazette is similar to the line pictured by General MacArthur's recent communiques except that there has been no indication from American sources that isolated North Korean sea landings have been linked up into a solid front.)

The paper reported that the Northern Army is approaching Taejon and said it had advanced about 32 miles in two days. It reported a column of Northern troops had advanced southeast to the area of Tanyan (Tanyang).

The Gazette said "it is evident the American aggressors view the bloody venture in Korea as a test for their forces for development of a big war in the Far East."

Correspondents for the Gazette headlined details of American bombing of North Korean targets: "American Murderers." They described young Koreans with their limbs blown off and said they saw a dying child in a Pyongyang hospital who had been machine-gunned by American planes.

The correspondents relayed the report of a North Korean air ace who said he shot down one American fighter over Pyongyang, North Korea capital, and forced another fighter and three bombers to flee.

The report said this was only one of "the glorious accomplishments" of this ace and his comrades.

Lie Requests Both Sides to End Atrocities

Lake Success, N. Y., July 12 (U.P.) United Nations Secretary-General Trygve Lie appealed to both sides in the Korean war today to stop atrocities.

Spurred by reports that at least seven American soldiers had been found dead, their hands tied behind their backs and bullets through their faces, the Norwegian diplomat asked both North and South Korea to accept observation teams of the International Red Cross to ascertain that the Geneva conventions on warfare are being observed.

Although no official reports of atrocities have reached his headquarters, Lie also was disturbed by press dispatches from Korea that the South Koreans deliberately broke the backs of a number of North Korean guerillas taken prisoners.

In identical cablegrams to B. C. Limb, Foreign Minister of the South Korean Republic, and Pak Hen Nen, Foreign Minister of the North Korean regime, Lie reminded them that the International Committee of the Red Cross offered its services June 26 "to examine with you the possibility of humanitarian action to establish measures for the application of the Geneva conventions for the protection on both sides of the military wounded and sick, war prisoners, civilian internees and the civilian population."

Red Cross Seeks Data On Atrocities Probe

The International Red Cross was asked yesterday to keep the American Red Cross up to date on efforts to investigate "indicated" atrocities against United States troops in Korea.

Frank Cleverley, ARC administrator of foreign operations, telegraphed International President Paul Ruegger in Geneva that the American public has "great faith" in the IRC's ability to "bring about adherence to the humanitarian conventions."

He asked to be informed when the international body gets permission to send a representative to North Korea. One has been named but so far he has received no safe-conduct from the Communists.

Happy Is The Day When Backache Goes Away . . . .
As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.
If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Draft Quotas For Maryland Counties Told

Maryland Selective Service headquarters announced in Baltimore yesterday that 119 draftees would be tapped in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties. The Free State has a quota of 294 out of the Army's call for 20,000 men. Allocations for the boards in the two nearby counties are as follows:

Rockville, 14; Silver Spring, 24; Chevy Chase, 15; Hyattsville, 29; Board 56 in Upper Marlboro, 17; Board 57 in Upper Marlboro, 20.

Allocations for other Maryland boards in the surrounding area include Board 31 Annapolis, 16; Board 32, Annapolis, 32; La Plata, 10; Board 45, Frederick, 16; Board 46, Frederick, 11; Leonardtown, 10; Board 62, Hagerstown, 16; Board 63, Hagerstown, 20.

Col. Henry C. Stanwood, Maryland draft chief, figures 1000 men will have to be called up to produce the quota of 294. Initial orders to report for examination went out yesterday to 14 selectees in Dundalk, in suburban Maryland.

In Fairfax County, Va., the Selective Service Board was advised by State headquarters it will be called on within 10 days to furnish 44 men for physical examinations.

In the District, Deputy Draft Director Frank Norton said the 15 local boards will probably begin sending out notices for physical exams to some 400 young men in Class 1-A within seven to 10 days. Out of this group, the District expects to meet its quota of 101.

Arrangements have yet to be made with the Army for a physical examination station here. It was definitely announced yesterday, however, that Washington area selectees will take their 14-week training course at Fort Dix, N. J.

Four hundred young men poured into District Selective Service headquarters at 1901 D st. nw. yesterday to ask questions, and to register. Of the 140 registered, only 20 met the legal requirement of reporting to their draft board within five days after attaining their 18th birthday.

Men between the ages of 18 through 25 who have failed to register with their board—all 15 are located in the same building with D. C. headquarters—should do so at once, Norton warned yesterday. The law provides penalties for failure to comply, he said.

Deputy Director Norton also urged all veterans between the ages of 18 through 25, who are already registered but have changed address, or have changed their status in a way as to affect their last rating, to notify their own boards at once by mail. The boards must have current information

Point 4 Guarantee Bill Passes House

By The Associated Press

The House yesterday passed a sharply restricted bill to guarantee American investments abroad and thus help build up the economies of underdeveloped nations.

The guarantees would apply only to enterprises that do not compete with American goods, and only in countries that will make their own guarantees by treaty.

The "Point Four" bill, part of President Truman's program for helping underdeveloped lands raise their living standards, was passed, 195 to 151. The amendments closely restricting what may be done under it were written in by the House Tuesday.

Before the final vote, the House rejected by a 28-vote margin a move by Representative Wolcott (R., Mich.) to shelve the bill by sending it back to committee. Wolcott said that after the amendments were put in the measure actually was meaningless.

Another part of the Point Four program, for technical aid to underdeveloped areas, already has congressional approval in an authorization bill limiting the first year's operations to a 35 million dollar outlay. The Senate Appropriations Committee, however, voted only 10 million dollars for the job and efforts are under way in the Senate to boost the allowance.

The bill passed by the House, which now goes to the Senate, authorizes the Export-Import Bank to set up a 250 million dollar fund to guarantee investors against such hazards as Government seizure, and to assure convertibility of profits into dollars.

Republican opponents of the plan called it "folly" and a "trap." Representative Crawford (R., Mich.) asserted that the 250 million dollars was intended only as a starter and the Administration was thinking of the future in terms of billions.

The restrictive amendments were voted just a few hours after President Truman had made a new plea for the plan in a letter read to the House by Chairman Spence (D., Ky.) of the Banking Committee.

Pleven Names Cabinet, Ends French Crisis

Paris, July 12 (AP).—Premier Rene Pleven announced the make-up of a new cabinet tonight and the end of France's 18-day government crisis seemed assured.

Pleven is a rightist. A member of the small Democratic and Socialist Union of Resistance (UDSR) and considered friendly to Gen. Charles de Gaulle, he will head a cabinet made up of Socialists, Radical Socialists and Popular Republicans, plus three independents and two members of his own group.

This is essentially the same combination of center parties which ruled France through recent years until last February, when the Socialists withdrew.

Socialists to Back Pleven

The return of the Socialists to the cabinet appeared to assure Pleven the support of their powerful bloc of 98 votes when he goes before the National Assembly Thursday to seek parliamentary approval.

Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, a Popular Republican, and Interior Minister Henri Queuille, a Radical Socialist, keep their posts in the new government. Schuman is sponsor of the French plan to pool western Europe's coal and steel.

Georges Bidault, whose cabinet fell June 24 on the issue of salary increases for government employes, is not in the new cabinet.

But his Catholic left-of-center MRP (Popular Republicans) contributed the man to run an important new job. He is Jean Letourneau, Minister of State for the Associated States of Indo-China. Letourneau takes Indo-China away from the conservative-minded overseas ministry and the result may be a new political deal for those Communist-threatened states.

De Gaulle Follower

Queuille's right-of-center Radical Socialists also are represented by Paul Giacobbi, a recent follower of General de Gaulle, who holds a new ministry without portfolio. Socialist enmity toward Bidault and Giacobbi wrecked a cabinet which Queuille put together 12 days ago, but Socialist objections to Giacobbi were now understood to be overcome.

The chief Socialists entering the government are Jules Moch, former strong man Minister of Interior who takes Pleven's old job of Defense Minister, and Guy Mollet, Socialist secretary-general, who is to be Minister of State for the affairs of the Council of Europe.

The Socialists also were given control of the Education Ministry, where they have been at odds with the Popular Republicans. Pierre-Olivier Lapie got the post.

Socialist Chief Protests Leopold

Brussels, Belgium, July 12 (U.P.).—Belgian Socialist leader Victor Larock warned the Catholic Party today that its plan to return exiled King Leopold III to the throne was "tantamount to declaring war on half the nation."

Larock made his warning in the joint session of Parliament called by the Catholic government to end the regency of Prince Charles and declare Leopold "fit to rule" again. The Catholics control both chambers of Parliament.

A 24-hour general strike against Leopold's return erupted today in the Socialist stronghold of Charleroi and scattered protest strikes were reported throughout the country.

'Nuclear TVA' Is Foreseen for U. S.

present technology, and the making of a "practical assessment" of it, for its war utility is "misguided."

It will result, he said, in forfeiting other, future, developments of far more importance to defense in the long run.

Weinberg, director of research of the AEC's Oak Ridge, Tenn., National Laboratory, said that without the pressure of military needs, the cost of producing atomic power reactors was, for the present at least, too high to offer much incentive for their construction merely as substitute for other, conventional fuels.

However, he explained, the defense needs for plutonium, the explosive of the atomic bomb, are such as to compel its manufacture, even at great expense. And in the process of making the new element, heat, and therefore power, is generated.

"We therefore seem to have found, in the name of military exigency, a means of financing and motivation for the development of nuclear power," Weinberg stated.

He forecast as "natural, an almost inevitable long-term pattern," the development of a "nuclear TVA in which the prime justification for the power plant is plutonium production—that is, a military justification in the national interest—but in which the by-product, power, is sold to the public."

Weinberg was hopeful that even if the military need for nuclear work was passed, there would still be a prospect for economically produced atomic power.

Hoover Proposal Rejected

Earlier in the day, a panel of experts on international organization gave short shrift to the recently repeated proposal of former President Herbert Hoover to oust Russia from the United Nations.

Former Senator John Sherman Cooper (R., Ky.), now special adviser to the Secretary of State, said such a step would do nothing but freeze the present situation and send Russia and the rest of the world even further apart.

According to John F. Gange, director of the university's Woodrow Wilson School of Foreign Affairs, Hoover's proposal amounts to asking the United States and Russia to "live in separate bedrooms," with that much less chance of being able to talk out any differences.

If Russia were ousted from the U. N., said Alfred P. Fernbach, professor of political science at the university, the United States' first step would have to be to try to find some substitute device by which it could talk to and negotiate with Russia.

U. N. 'Point Four' Backed

On another subject, the panel, led by Cooper and Stringfellow Barr, president of the Foundation for World Government, agreed that the best chance for permanent peace lay in a program patterned on President Truman's Point Four plan for aiding underdeveloped areas.

Barr insisted the program should be done by the U. N. and with public money, since he was convinced private investment would not be forthcoming.

In consequence, Barr said, "a lot of this cold war nonsense would begin to dissolve."

Barr said he felt most people did not believe the United States was in the role of enforcing a U. N. decision, but rather that the United States had dragged the U. N. along in sanctioning our action. Gange, agreeing, said that because we did not ask U. N. action at the time of the Truman Doctrine for military aid to Greece our present action in Korea is "suspect."

Cooper, however, contended the actions and attitudes of the European nations at the recent London Conference revealed that United States leadership is desired, and that there is a clear understanding of the community of interest in joint action to fend off Communist aggression.

Curbs Urged On Production

pact of foreign obligations on the American economy.

Members of the council were reported last week as believing no curtailment of civilian industry was needed in the light of the Korean war. But, an informed source said yesterday, this estimate was based on earlier and erroneous assumptions as to the strength of the Communist forces.

The apparition of heavily armed Communist tanks in Korea, in formidable numbers, has required new calculations, and the prospect now is that the council's report will be revised drastically before it goes to the President.

Success May Embolden Reds

Diplomatic as well as military and economic considerations lie behind the sudden new sense of urgency. There are real fears in official quarters that the Communists' success in Korea up to now may embolden them to repeat the performance, perhaps in Yugoslavia, perhaps elsewhere.

Many officials still believe the Russians do not want to start a world war now, although the Korean assault was more reckless than anything the Kremlin has yet attempted. Some officials still believe, too, that the Russians do not want to rouse the sleeping American giant to such a point that he begins to mobilize his vast industrial resources for war.

For this reason, it is argued, a curtailment of civilian production here might make Premier Stalin reflect and ponder, and might remind him of the prodigies of American military output during the war.

The first considerations are the present lack of equipment, the race against time, the bristling strength of the Communist arsenal, and the gigantic stake of the whole free world in the outcome of the present struggle in Korea.

Excise Tax Cut Plans Shelved by Senate

the hearings are over until all the testimony is printed.

But he ordered what amounted to an indefinite delay by arranging to open a long series of conferences on the Social Security bill with House managers on Monday.

Snyder is said to have withdrawn Treasury support of the measure during the present emergency in separate talks with George and House Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N.C.) late Tuesday.

Ten days ago he had commended the Senate Finance Committee for making the measure contingent on war developments. At that time he said he would not hesitate to withdraw his indorsement if war developments warranted.

Informed members quoted Snyder as saying the Administration has not yet decided whether taxes should be raised to meet war expenses.

They said the Administration will make a formal statement in a day or two, possibly in a message to Congress, requesting continuation of excise taxes at their present level for the time being.

Meanwhile the Treasury withheld any formal confirmation of Snyder's action. A Snyder aide told newsmen: "We have nothing to say."

The bill as it passed the House, after five months of committee work, cut excises $1,010,000,000 but made up the loss by boosting taxes on big corporations and plugging a number of loopholes.

Some members of the House Ways and Means Committee expressed disappointment that some revisions, correcting "inequities," would be lost.

Representative Robert W. Kean (R., N. J.) said he thought Congress at least ought to salvage proposed taxes on what he termed "phony" charitable trusts, and educational institutions conducting unrelated business enterprises, among others.

The Finance Committee, meanwhile, heard testimony from Garner N. Lester, of Jackson, Miss., president of the National Tax Equality Association, and former Representative Jerry Voorhis (R., Calif.), secretary of the Cooperative League.

Lester said cooperatives should be subjected to the same taxes imposed on corporations. Voorhis opposed taxation of any cooperatives that forego profits in order to benefit their patrons.

Civil Air Patrol Cadets to Train At Andrews Base

About 130 Civil Air Patrol cadets from the District and Maryland will begin a two-week encampment Saturday at Andrews Air Force Base.

Dutch Establish $2500 Annual Journalism Prize

By the United Press

The Dutch government yesterday set up a $2500 annual journalism award in memory of 14 newspaper correspondents killed in an airplane crash near Bombay, India, a year ago.

The award, to be called the "William the Silent" prize in honor of the democratic-minded Dutch Kink of 400 years ago, will go yearly to the American writer of the best article or series promoting Netherlands-American relations. It will include a gold medal.

Private contributions from Dutch citizens made the award possible. President Truman praised the award as "generous" in money and "even more impressive" in spirit.

"There could be no more suitable memorial to the newspapermen who so tragically lost their lives than this splended contribution to a better understanding among peoples of the world," he said.

U. S.-Trained Doctors Asked to Volunteer

Chicago, July 12 (AP).—Doctors trained at Government expense during and since World War II were urged today to volunteer their services for use when needed by the armed forces.

"The American Medical Association . . . feels that these young men have a moral responsibility to come toward immediately to offer their services for use when needed," an AMA spokesman said.

Dr. James C. Sargent of Milwaukee, chairman of the AMA Council on National Emergency Service, added that "many thousands" of physicians were deferred during the last war to complete their educations and other thousands were educated at Government expense in ASTP and V-12 programs.

Americans on U. N. Staff May Be Drafted

Lake Success, July 12 (AP).—Americans on the United Nations secretariat are subject to the draft just like anyone else, a U. N. spokesman said today.

There are approximately 1500 Americans in the U. N. civil service but the U. N. did not know how many are liable to the draft.

More Red Chinese Move to Manchuria

Hongkong, July 12 (AP).—Continued movement of Chinese Communist troops to Manchuria from South China was reported in Nationalist dispatches today.

Troops of unestimated strength were said to have arrived in Canton Tuesday on their way to Manchuria.

A small movement of Communist troops from Canton toward the Hong Kong border also was reported. The dispatches said this maneuver was intended to confuse foreign intelligence as to "the real intentions" of the Reds, and to distract attention from transfer of sizable forces toward Manchuria.

Draftees, Reservists Save Rights on Jobs

The Government yesterday assured draftees and reservists who go on active duty with the armed forces that they have reemployment rights in the jobs they leave.

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin said the Selective Service Act of 1948 gives inductees and enlistees and reservists who go on active duty before June 9, 1951, reemployment rights for at least three years.

India's Socialists Hit U. S. Formosa Action

Madras, India, July 12 (AP).—India's Socialists voiced support today for United Nations action in Korea but expressed disapproval of "unilateral American intervention in Formosa."

In a resolution passed at its eighth annual conference here, the all-India Socialist party said also that mediation of the Korean war "even at this late hour is desirable and possible." The resolution urged the Indian government to adopt a "positive policy" on mediation.

The party statement said the invasion of South Korea "exposed the hollowness of the peace offensive recently launched by world Communists."

One Killed in Galilee Israel-Syria Incident

Tel Aviv, July 12 (U.P.)—One Jewish settler was killed and one wounded on the Sea of Galilee this morning in the most serious incident along the Israeli-Syrian frontier since the armistice. Three Israeli policemen were reported captured by the Syrians.

An Israeli army spokesman said an Israeli police launch became entangled in a Syrian fishing net north of Ein Gev. A vessel manned by Jewish settlers put out from Ein Gev to assist, but was fired on by Syrian frontier guards on the shore.

Second Draft Is Predicted

the big Army training centers to handle the expanded forces. Camp Chaffee, Ark. and Fort Jackson, S. C., are the most likely choices. Training divisions—probably the Fifth Armored and Fifth Infantry—would be established at the bases for handling the basic training of draftees and recruits.

(6) Expansion of the Marine Corps, probably to replace the First Division units heading for the Far East.

(7) Hauling additional Navy ships and Navy and Air Force planes out of mothballs.

Officials made it plain that final decisions on these points have not yet been taken, but declared that an expansion program along such lines is almost complete. All of the steps may not be taken at once, and news from the front could change the picture.

However, the concensus of opinion at the Pentagon is that things are going to get worse in Korea before they get better, and a more extensive mobilization effort than was contemplated a week ago now is expected.

Actually, the first moves taken—lifting the manpower ceilings, call for volunteers, the first draft call and decision to transfer Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Forces overseas—were emergency, interim measures taken while top planners sized up the situation and worked out more complete, longer range plans.

The steadily worsening situation at the front and realization that American forces may be driven back against the sea—an event that would mean the fighting will last months—has had its effect.

Meanwhile, the Navy announced that two escort aircraft carriers—the Cape Esperance and Sitkoh Bay—will be taken out of mothballs at Tacoma, Wash., and put into service in the Pacific. An undisclosed—but "limited"— number of other Naval vessels, mostly auxiliaries, and some naval planes will also be put back in active services, a spokesman said.

The planes to be taken from reserve stocks include Corsair, Hellcat and Bearcat fighters and Avenger torpedo bombers, it was said.

A rush activation job will be done to the two CVE's to get them ready within 30 days, for hauling planes across the Pacific, and therefore their catapults and arresting gear will not be put in service.

In this condition the carriers would be available for ferrying jobs only, but a Navy source said the additional work to fit them for combat operations undoubtedly would be done later, perhaps by the ship's crews.

Another announcement during the day bore out a recent disclosure by The Post that the armed forces were attempting to mobilize some reserve forces as units by urging whole organizations to volunteer and not just individuals. The Navy announced that every officer and men in one of its organized air reserve units—Fighting Squadron 781 in San Diego—had been accepted for active duty, and that the squadron will stay together.

The Adjutant General of Maryland, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, announced in Baltimore that no more resignations or discharges will be allowed for the duration of the Korean War. He said the order is aimed at keeping the Maryland Guard at present strength and "is not to be construed as a preliminary step to calling the Guard to active duty."

Here in Washington, Maj Gen. Ellard Walsh, president of the National Guard Association, said that undoubtedly other States will take like action. He declared that Reckord's halt on discharges could apply only to special releases, as the Guard cannot hold anyone in service who seeks discharge after expiration of his period of enlistment.

Reckord said his order did not apply to war veterans with more than 90 days service between Pearl Harbor and VJ-Day. He declared that nonveterans aged 19 through 25 are liable to be drafted if they get out of the Guard. And he said that youths not yet 18½ years old will not be subject to draft if they enlist in the Guard.

Walsh pointed out that the Guard's 27 divisions are now about half strength—some 9000 men in each unit. If any are called into service, they would have to be enlarged by assignment of draftees or enlistees.

Both men inducted and volunteers will come into the Army on the same basis, a spokesman said yesterday. They'll both go to one of the four basic training centers—Fort Dix, N. J.; Fort Knox, Ky.; Fort Riley, Tex., or Fort Ord, Calif.—for 14 weeks basic.

After this, they'll get about a week's furlough and then be assigned to Army units training in the United States. Some may go overseas later, but not many under present plans, the official said. If the present emergency clears up, they might be released in a year or 15 months, the spokesman declared.

Other officials said the Army can handle about 70,000 additional men at the present four basic training centers. That would build the Army to its last year's appropriated strength of 677,000 officers and men.

Word that plans are being readied for opening another one or two such centers indicates current planning calls for going above 700,000 men.

An announcement by the Maritime Administration last night said that 15 Victory ships and a refrigerator cargo vessel will be pulled out of its West Coast mothball fleet and chartered to commercial shipping lines for service in the emergency. This is in addition to the 16 chartered for similar services the day before.

Crime Probers Open Miami Hearings

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Miami, July 13.—The Senate Crime Investigating Committee opens hearings here Thursday morning designed to prove the interstate nature of big-time racketeering in America today.

Hints from committee staff members who have been here several days were that some dramatic public sessions are in prospect.

Senators Kefauver (D., Tenn.) and Hunt (D., Wyo.) arrived here by plane with a party of newspapermen during the night. Of the five Senators on the committee they were the only ones that would make the trip. Before leaving Washington, Kefauver issued a statement declaring in part:

"Gradually, piece by piece, we are assembling a Nation-wide picture of organized crime that indicates a definite network involving the same figures in several States and shows beyond doubt that operating criminal groups have country-wide ramifications."

The Miami hearings, scheduled for the United States Court House here, will be the committee's first opportunity to demonstrate that it has gathered the facts to back up such general statements as Kefauver's.

A major point of interest to those who have been following the committee will be the way it goes after the crime-in-politics angle of the investigation. The Senators were ordered by the Senate, in setting up the special committee with a $150,000 budget, to determine the extent of the "corrupting influence" of modern-day interstate racketeers in American politics.

Some 30 witnesses have been lined up for the Miami hearings, scheduled for Thursday and Friday. They may keep the show going an additional day, especially if any of the 10 missing witnesses turn up. A list of these men was made public Tuesday but committee officials said none had yet shown up and United States Marshals have been unable to serve them with subpenas.

In his statement yesterday, Kefauver gave out a letter he had received from New York's Mayor William O'Dwyer, pledging cooperation. Kefauver said cryptically that the Senate committee has an "enormous amount of ground" to cover in the New York area.

Patterson Sees Invasion Crushed Within 6 Months

New York, July 12 (U.P.).—Former War Secretary Robert P. Patterson predicted today that U. S. troops will push North Korean Communists back to the 38th parallel within six months.

After that, he said, any further moves by U. S. troops will depend upon the decisions of the United Nations Security Council.

Patterson, returning from a business trip to Europe, said he believed the U. S. would use an atom bomb immediately in the event of war, but not in Korea.

Peace Appeal

Secretary of State Acheson's comment at his press conference yesterday on the so-called "World Peace Appeal" or "Stockholm Resolution" is illuminating and timely. He referred to it as a "propaganda trick" and expressed confidence that the American people will not be fooled by it. No doubt his confidence is justified in regard to most Americans. But his exposure of the Communist-inspired petition was needed for the benefit of innocents disposed to take anything emanating from Moscow at its face value.

We have received, and published on this page, a pair of letters deploring a recent editorial which referred to the "World Peace Appeal" as a "booby trap." The thought expressed by both our correspondents was that any plea for peace deserved support in this time of tension, regardless of its origin. We think this attitude a respectable but mistaken one; and while we sympathize with the sentiments of our critics, we cannot help feeling that they lack contact with reality.

Quackery is always dangerous; and it is most dangerous when it pretends to satisfy some deeply felt human need. All men yearn to find a cure for war, as all men yearn to find a cure for cancer or any of the other dread diseases. But the charlatan who deludes men with a fake nostrum may keep them from the very measures indispensable to their safety and well-being. The peace appeal instigated in Moscow which has won so many hopeful but deluded signers throughout the world seems to us to be of this character. It is designed to lull men into repose, to make them believe that peace can be preserved by an unequal form of atomic disarmament under which the United States would renounce its most formidable weapon while leaving the sources of Soviet power undiminished. The meaning of the "World Peace Appeal" can perhaps be best gauged, as Secretary Acheson suggested, by the simple fact that more than half the population of North Korea signed it within a week or two of their assault upon South Korea and their cynical challenge of the authority of the United Nations.

CAB's Loss

The Civil Aeronautics Board has suffered a serious blow in the resignation of Chairman Joseph J. O'Connell, jr. Mr. O'Connell came to the CAB after the board had suffered a tempestuous interlude and gave it much needed stability and calmness of direction. He has sometimes been criticized for being slow to act with respect to reevaluation of the route pattern and measures to separate airmail pay from subsidy, but no one has doubted that he is a man of integrity who has done his best to uphold the public interest against many pressures. He deserves particular credit for his efforts to tighten up the regulations on abuses by non-scheduled carriers and for the long-range view he has taken of air transportation. His job has not been an easy one, and it will be more than a little difficult to replace him with a man of equally judicious temperament.

Undoubtedly Mr. O'Connell had personal reasons for wanting to get back into private law practice. But it is impossible to dissociate his resignation from two incidents of more than passing significance. The first is the running vendetta which Chairman John Rooney of a House Appropriations Subcommittee has carried on against Mr. O'Connell. Personal interchanges between the two were bitter, and the Rooney subcommittee recommended an appropriations cut of nearly a million dollars which the House adopted and which the Senate Appropriations Committee has not fully repaired.

The second incident involves the attitude of the White House on the North Atlantic merger case, details of which have not yet been announced publicly. This case concerns the proposed purchase of American Overseas Airlines by Pan American Airways. The matter was before the CAB for nearly 18 months and was an extremely knotty decision, involving as it did the elimination of one of the three American lines serving Europe through sale to the largest and most energetic operator. Reportedly the board majority recommended against the merger, with Mr. O'Connell taking a leading part. It is said that the White House at one time was ready to assent to the board's decision, but at the last minute the President changed his mind and overruled it.

The merits of the merger itself cannot be discussed without the details. Certainly there is room for argument that two strong lines are better than three less stable ones, though it may be doubted whether the placing of Pan American in direct competition with its weaker competitor, Trans-World, is the right answer. What is not so understandable is the President's reported intervention. Because of the defense and international political implications, he is given the final say on decisions affecting international air routes. This right of intercession, however, is one which should be used sparingly; certainly the decision of a board of experts ought not to be upset without compelling reason. In view of the necessity for maintaining public confidence in the judgment of the CAB, those reasons ought to be explained fully.

Space For Time

Continuing bad news from Korea emphasizes the deadly seriousness of the struggle we are engaged in there. The devastating way in which Russian tanks are being employed by the Korean Communists indicates a costly miscalculation by American military men, one of several miscalculations that include overestimation of the South Korean army and the effectiveness of our own Air Force. At the same time, it is necessary to keep the defeats in perspective.

Essentially what we are doing is buying time with space. At best not much more than an American regiment has so far been committed to battle. We are gambling that by a series of holding and delaying actions real American force can be brought to bear soon enough to prevent us from being pushed into the sea. That, of course, would be disastrous not only as a military defeat, but for its effect in emboldening the Russians to believe that they could try the same sort of quick invasion elsewhere and get away with it.

This purchase of time for space is essential with the kind of forces the United States now possesses. In no event would it have been possible to commit large numbers of troops immediately unless we had had forces poised and ready for this assignment. The hope in Korea lies in protecting the lines of communication and supply, including the all-essential port of Pusan. To do this we shall have to have not only more troops, but, more essential, better weapons to stop the tanks and better tactical air support. Even though whatever tanks we may put into the field are inferior to the best Russian models, we should be able to equip our forces with more effective anti-tank weapons.

To support more intensive action in Korea—and meet the threat of trouble elsewhere—it is becoming apparent that limited industrial mobilization will be necessary. Officials close to the President are strongly espousing this view. Selective industrial mobilization probably could be carried out without great disruption; for example, television set manufacture could be diverted in favor of radar, and automobile production curtailed to furnish more tanks. Already the airlines have instituted a "bumping" system and some civilian planes have been chartered by the military. What is important here is to move quickly to supply specific demands while not being swept off our feet by bad news which, to a certain extent at least, is to be expected.

Even more important is to take seriously the Korean lessons as they apply to defense planning. In addition to contributing to the defense of western Europe, which is still the main objective, we must be prepared for other prompt police actions. For the Russians, unless they are stopped soon in Korea, can tie us down all over the world in a series of incidents without ever committing their own troops. To counter this we need not only the military support of other countries in the United Nations, but also a change in the composition of our ground forces plus added emphasis on air lift. In other words, we need to have both better intelligence and the trained men, supplies and transportation necessary to get a police force into action quickly.

Salutary Reversal

It takes a good deal of courage for a court to reverse itself, for a reversal is an admission that the judges were previously wrong in their judgment. Nevertheless, every alert court at times finds it necessary to wipe out past mistakes and write on a clean sheet. When such an overturn is based on sound reasoning and especially when it stems from factors overlooked in prior decisions, it is a mark of both integrity and open-mindedness on the part of the judges and should be applauded as such. A case in point is the decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia holding that a person confined for insanity after his sanity has been regained may be immediately released through habeas corpus proceedings. Recognizing the importance of the case, the entire court heard the arguments and unanimously concluded that it had been wrong in three previous rulings.

The new decision appears to be based on a more comprehensive consideration of the act setting up the Commission on Mental Health for the District. The court had previously concluded that a trial judge, although convinced of the sanity of a mental patient seeking a writ of habeas corpus, had no power to release him forthwith, but could only order the case reopened before the commission. Disregarding those rulings, Judge Goldsborough released a man from St. Elizabeths Hospital. In the restudy of the issue that then followed, the Government counsel were convinced that they had been in error and helped to convert the Court of Appeals. Apparently the reversal turned upon the fact that before the Mental Health Act was passed persons regaining their sanity had the right of release through habeas corpus and the statute says that nothing in it shall deprive an insane person of existing remedies to obtain his release.

In addition to bringing the law into closer harmony with the statute, Judge Miller's opinion also adds a desirable safeguard against injustice. "Liberty can as well be lost in a mental hospital as in a jail," Chief Judge Stephens had said in a previous case. Any conscientious judge will naturally seek medical advice, when confronted by a habeas corpus petition for the release of a mental hospital patient who appears to have regained his sanity. And the Commission on Mental Health is the most logical source of such advice. Nevertheless, our concept of justice requires that decisions of this sort be made by the courts, and when the issue arises on habeas corpus—that traditional safeguard of freedom—we see no reason why any commission should short-circuit the judicial process.

Korean War Criminals

The question of what to do with the Korean war criminals will be given increasing attention as the invaders are halted and conquered. Senator McMahon has asked that the United States send the names of the individuals it holds responsible for the crime of aggression against the Korean Republic to the United Nations. Morris Amchan, former deputy chief counsel for war crimes at Nuernberg, has suggested that the Security Council adopt a resolution to the effect that all persons holding high positions who participate in the waging of aggressive war or unlawful invasion will be held criminally responsible therefor before an international tribunal. We hope that appropriate means of bringing the criminals to justice can be promptly found.

Mr. Amchan rightly points out that the situation today is different from what it was during World War II. The Security Council has officially proclaimed the invasion of South Korea to be an unlawful breach of the peace. Unquestionably those who planned it and are now directing its operation are guilty of an international crime. Their apprehension and trial is a direct responsibility of the free world. The unfortunate fact is, however, that the world still has no specific law on this subject and no established tribunal competent to try the criminal aggressors in Korea if they can be caught.

The need for an international convention on war crimes has often been pointed out by officials and international lawyers and by this newspaper. Nearly four years ago Francis Biddle, the American member of the International Military Tribunal at Nuernberg, asked for the drafting of "a code of international criminal law," and President Truman laid the problem before the U. N. General Assembly, which has the power to initiate studies of such matters and to make recommendations. The Assembly approved the Nuernberg principles and directed its International Law Commission to draft a code of offenses against the peace and security of mankind, on which work is now going forward at Geneva.

It would be naive, of course, to minimize the difficulty of getting a convention on war crimes adopted by all the powers that participated in the Nuernberg trials. In the present state of affairs no treaty that would be satisfactory to the free world would stand any chance of approval by the Kremlin. But the existence of such a treaty among a substantial group of free countries within the United Nations would in itself be a long step forward in regularizing the punishment of war criminals. And it might have a restraining effect upon potential aggressors who may be inclined to plot future invasions.

In our opinion, the world should have, in addition to a convention on war crimes, a permanent tribunal—perhaps a branch of the International Court of Justice—that could try cases of this sort. Here again the obstacles to establishment of such a tribunal are enormous. But that is no argument against taking the first steps that seem to be feasible. Aggression is now recognized as a crime throughout the free world and at least in theory behind the Iron Curtain. The Korean invasion is certain to stimulate the demand for additional action on this front, and we hope that the International Law Commission will soon be ready to make concrete recommendations.

Giveaway

The House Rules Committee, which is not always so complaisant, has now cleared the way for another one of those bills designed to give away the riches of the marginal sea. The Supreme Court said unequivocally in the California case in 1947 and in the recent Texas and Louisiana cases that the United States has paramount rights in and dominion over the marginal sea—the submerged area lying seaward of the low-tide mark off the Nation's coasts. But the members of Congress—who seem to consider themselves ambassadors of independent principalities rather than participants in a national legislature—persist in trying to turn control of this national heritage over to the States. President Truman has already vetoed one measure designed to do this. We trust, if the necessity arises, he will do so again.

The marginal sea is presumed to contain a vast store of oil which could prove vital to the country's defense. It ought to be carefully conserved for that purpose. The folly of proposing to transfer it to the States for indiscriminate private exploitation is underscored by the news of the last few days from Korea. Congress can rationally and equitably make some generous arrangement to share with the coastal States revenue derived from the submerged lands off their shores. The Justice and Interior Departments have, indeed, proposed such an arrangement. But the clear duty of Congress, in view the Supreme Court's rulings, is to provide speedily for prudent Federal management of what should now be regarded as an inalienable national resource.

Freedom Of Religion

I wish to add my voice to that of Monseigneur McCarthy who, in his letter published on July 10, questions the fairness of the United Press survey which rates Switzerland and Sweden a score of 100 percent in religious freedom. The conditions which he describes in these two countries are certainly not in keeping with the spirit of religious freedom as we know it and cherish it in America today.

I wonder, however, why Monseigneur McCarthy questions the ratings on these two predominantly Protestant countries alone. I wonder if he finds acceptable the 100 percent ratings that were given to Chile, Uraguay, Paraguay, Brazil, and Ecuador. While it might not seem very evident to Monseigneur McCarthy if he himself were to visit these predominantly Roman Catholic countries, it has become distressingly clear to many of our Protestant missionaries that far too often "religious freedom" means only freedom to be a Roman Catholic.

While the laws of these countries claim to permit religious freedom, it is nevertheless almost true that a non-Catholic finds it nearly impossible to hold a place of public office. While, for example, the constitution of Brazil may be more liberal than that of Switzerland in that it does not prohibit the exponents of any religion from preaching in public, nevertheless Protestant ministers are frequently stoned for trying to hold worship services in public places.

I am sure that Monseigneur McCarthy shares with me the very sincere hope that in every country, and especially in our own, religious freedom shall become not only a matter of having the right kind of laws, but of maintaining that spirit which will never discriminate against any man in any way because of his religion.

"Egyptian Action"

As an Egyptian and therefore as a member of a free nation which has a representative form of government and a firm democracy, I wish to express my opinion on your July 2 editorial in regard to Egypt's action in the Korean crisis.

Your paper stated the Egyptians have been "aggressors during the Arab-Jewish dispute." It was the Zionists, not the Egyptians who killed 200 Arab women, Christians and Moslems, 90 of them pregnant. The Arab states took action in Palestine for the sole purpose of protecting their own people from the terrorism and atrocities of Zionist outrages.

Were not all such massacres acts of aggression, which, like the Korean war, deserved the attention of the United Nations? But what, may I ask, did the U. N. do to stop Zionist terrorism and the massacres at Dir Yassin, Masr-el-Din, Beit Darras and Elhoun?

It seems logical, therefore, that such an incompetent organization should not and ought not in the future receive any support from Egypt for the following reasons:

1. The inability of the U. N. to act on the above-mentioned cases which deserved the same attention as the Korean conflict.

2. Failure of the U. N. to act on the following resolutions which were passed by a majority at the Assembly but were not enforced: (a) resolution of 1948 fixing the boundaries between Israel and the Arab states which gave part of the Negeb desert to the Arabs; (b) resolution of 1949 ordering Arab refugees back to their homeland; (c) resolution of December, 1949, calling for internationalization of Jerusalem.

3. Egypt refused to give the West moral support in the Korean crisis because the West in turn refused to listen to her case demanding the withdrawal of British troops from the Suez Canal.

This does not mean that Egypt is on the side of Korean aggression. I am sure all Egyptians agree with me that they would have liked to take a different attitude on the Korean question had they been more justly treated by the Western powers and the United Nations.

Lower Speed Limits

Four hundred eighty-two persons were killed on the highways last weekend and an estimated 16,000 were injured. If all motor speed limits were automatically reduced by 10 miles per hour, on such weekends, I believe that 99 percent of the accidents would be eliminated.

Korean Lesson

Perhaps the public has a right to know why U. S. Army commanders have apparently not yet equipped American anti-tank units with weapons capable of dealing with the heavy-tank minded Russians when it is two years since the crisis over Berlin and seven years or more since the Germans began using their ingenious, lethal, tri-purpose 88 gun on American tanks and troops.

Suppose that the inadequate armament and military morale of western Europe should prove too great a temptation to the Soviet leaders and the Red Army were ordered to cut through all Europe: When the reported postwar Soviet tanks weighing around 90 tons appeared, what types of American tanks would be available even within three months?

The Korean affair has possibly drawn adequate press criticism of the State and Defense Departments misestimations of Soviet plans. But do enough people realize yet what a lengthy time it takes for even the American industrial system to convert designs and blueprints into equipment ready for use?

Furthermore, when competent Allied officers in eastern Europe during the last war observed that much of the astonishing, early Nazi successes against the Russians was due to the striking superiority of the German infantry, why has that Army branch been neglected comparatively? VETERAN.

Invasion Tipoff

On June 25, the Red army of North Korea crashed across the Thirty-eighth Parallel in a well-prepared invasion of South Korea and caught the defenders of that area, including ourselves, flatfooted. It would be untruthful, however, for us to say that we were not forewarned, for on June 10—15 days before the Red's attack—Izvestia, official organ of the Soviet government, published a precis of North Korea's plans and intentions, clear, for all who would, to see. Here, much curtailed as to verbiage, is a free but accurate translation of Izvestia's article.

"Phenyang, June 8 (Tass).—Appeal of the Central Committee of the United Democratic National Front of Korea to the Korean people:

In June of last year the United Democratic National Front proposed a peaceful union of our native land, but this proposal has never yet been put through. Soon now, the Korean people will celebrate the fifth anniversary of their historic day of independence — August 15. But the thirty-eighth parallel still separates artificially our land into two parts. This dividing line operates to the enormous detriment of the economy of our country. American imperialists and the anti-national clique of Li Sen Man are guilty of this delay in the unification of our native land. . . . In respect to the illegal elections of last May 30 to the so-called National Assembly of South Korea, it must be pointed out that they were not free, but were conducted under pressure from the United States with threats, deceit and terror against unacceptable candidates. . . .

"We never did, and never will, consider the thirty-eighth parallel our state frontier. The Korean people, both of the north and the south, await with impatience the unification of their country. They want to live united politically, economically and culturally. The Central Committee appeals to all democratic political parties and social organizations, to the whole Korean people, with the proposal to unite our native land, and so celebrate together the forthcoming fifth anniversary of our independence.

"To this end, and for a speedy realization of our peaceful union, the Central Committee proposes to all organizations and patriots who love their country the following:

"1. On August 5-8 to call, in both North and South Korea, general elections and create a united, supreme legislative organ of power;

"2. On August 15 call, in the city of Seoul, a session of the supreme elected legislative authorities;

"3. During the period of June 15-17, in the region of the 38th parallel, call either in Kaido or Kesan a conference of the democratic political organizations of North and South Korea desiring this peaceful union for the purpose of discussing means and methods of procedure;

"4. Those national traitors who have sabotaged the peaceful unification of the country (here follows a list of nine South Koreans, by name) shall not be admitted to the conferences. Members of the United Nations Korean Commission also shall not be permitted to participate in this work; the Korean people can establish their peaceful union without foreign interference;

"5. During the period of conferences and general elections the responsibility for maintaining order shall be undertaken by the respective authorities of North and South Korea."

This is language unmistakable in its intent, and so comprehensive as to leave almost nothing to the imagination. I submit, therefore, that the American people, who are called upon to face the situation so unexpectedly thrust upon them with money, blood and tears, are entitled to an explanation, and a good one.

Encouraging Korean Morale

By Malvina Lindsay

Genocide Action

WHEN I WAS a child I had a mite box for Korea. Into it I dropped pennies to support missions in that distant peninsula. A boy in the neighborhood church grew up to become a missionary in Korea.

Thousands of other Americans have similar ties. For in the great foreign missionary movement Korea was at one time a favorite child of American churches. This was because of the reputed gentleness and friendliness of the people and their receptivity to Christianity, also because of American sympathy for them in their long suffering under autocracy.

Today, it is estimated, Korea has about one million Christians, two-thirds Protestant, one-third Catholic. Hence a fertile field for the practice of genocide is offered in areas under Communist domination.

Communist dictators would naturally seek extinction of a religious group that owes its origin to "Western imperialism," and that has encouraged nationalist aspiration and emphasized the dignity of the individual.

CHRISTIANS are probably the largest and most easily spotted group of Koreans that could be marked for elimination. However, intellectuals, and certain political, social and nationalist groups would also be regarded as "dangerous." For in this crucial spot where the cold war has turned hot autocratic forces will take no chance on any kind of nonconformity.

Hence American action on the genocide treaty, adopted by the United Nations and now in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, would be a strategic stroke now. Such action would give this country a powerful propaganda weapon to be used not only in Korea but throughout Asia.

It would say to the one-twentieth of the Korean population, the one million Christians: We are cementing our old spiritual ties with you. We are pledging ourselves to help defend your practice of the religious faith we introduced to you—as well as your practice of other faiths. It would also impress again upon the continent of Asia that this country was backing up the United Nations.

Recently the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, meeting in New York, adopted a resolution urging the United States Senate and the Parliament of Canada to approve the genocide convention. Many delegates were disturbed over reports of oppressions of religious groups in Northern Korea.

THE MORALE of the South Koreans is a big stake in the present struggle. For no amount of weapons or imported manpower can compensate for a people's defeatism.

Many are asking now: Why hasn't the American influence, via the missionary movement and the education in this country of many Koreans, not built stronger native leadership for Western democratic ideals?

One reason has been the Japanese rule, which began in 1910. In the ensuing years of tyranny Japan practiced mental genocide on the Koreans. Their efforts toward self expression were suppressed. They were kept out of occupations or situations in which they might develop leadership—even out of skilled labor.

Hence when the South Korean republic was set up there was lack of experienced personnel in government and industry. And during the war years and before, many Korean leaders were in exile. Missionaries were evacuated. The boy I had known came home to be pastor of a Korean settlement church in a large city. All of this created a vacuum for Communist infiltration.

Yet a Korean underground was active against the Japanese during the war years. If there is now sufficient hope for Koreans, a greater fighting zeal will assert itself. Gen. Douglas MacArthur recently reported in a communique there were "indications of unrest in North Korea," which he said gave "insight into the mounting problems confronting the North Korean government."

Today we have quicker means of reaching the Koreans than when missionaries sailed in slow boats. But we have been lying down on the job. We have had feeble radio broadcasts in South Korea while Communists were indoctrinating by powerful stations in the North. Only 17 young Koreans hold government sponsored scholarships to the United States, while hundreds have been sent to study in Russia. We have nine libraries of information in South Korea, while there are hundreds of Communist cultural centers in North Korea.

If we could move quickly enough toward a powerful blanketing of all Korea with statement of our intent and action (including support of the U. N. genocide convention) the timetable of physical battle might be shortened.

Integrated Troops

One very effective measure of psychological warfare that our Defense Establishment might utilize in the Korean police action is the use of racially integrated units. Such a relatively simple measure could have a tremendous impact propaganda-wise.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Deficit Diplomacy

UNLESS a diplomatic solution can be worked out, the campaign in Korea to force the North Korean army back to the Thirty-eighth Parallel cannot be counted on to take less than several months. A line will have to be established behind which the counter-offensive can be mounted. The rains must end and the ground must harden. If all goes well in the sense that the fighting remains localized in Korea, the military decision called for by the Security Council might be looked for in the autumn.

Lippmann

During this anxious and dangerous period we shall, in addition to the measures required for the Korean campaign itself, have to redress our over-all position in the world. For the Korean affair has demonstrated—fortunately in time to correct it—how President Truman has allowed our commitments to increase while our power to meet them has been allowed to decline. The Truman Doctrine, interpreted as an American obligation to fight wherever there is aggression on the one hand, and the military cutbacks and the roaring civilian boom on the other hand, are the very negation of a sound national policy. In Korea we are suffering painful reverses; they are local and limited samples of what can happen when, to make it specific, Mr. Acheson has commitments which Mr. Johnson is not prepared to carry out.

THE FACT of the matter is that Mr. Johnson did not know, the Chiefs of Staff did not know, General MacArthur did not know, that the United States might have to fight a war in Korea. There was no decision taken in cold blood well in advance of the North Korean aggression and then supported by a plan of operations. Though it was known, perhaps once asserted it was felt, that we had a moral, and some kind of political commitment, to the South Koreans, the only planning done in advance seems to have been to turn at once, as we did within a few hours, to the United Nations. Little, if anything else, seems to have been planned, much less prepared in advance.

What happened, then, was that President Truman and Secretary Acheson, who make foreign policy, were committed in Korea. Yet they were not so clearly and definitely committed in Korea that they insisted on being prepared for a Korean campaign. And so President Truman as Commander-in-Chief allowed Secretary Johnson and the high command in Washington and in Tokyo to "write off" Korea as not worth the military effort to defend it. The fact that Korea had been written off is probably the best explanation not only of why General MacArthur's intelligence service was totally surprised, but also why the troops he had to throw so hastily into the battle were so untrained and so badly armed. General MacArthur did not prepare for a Korean campaign because he did not believe and did not know that President Truman would ever decide to order a Korean campaign.

NO ONE, I think, can condone the practice of the civilians taking positions where they may feel they have to order our troops to fight in places where the soldiers have not been told to be prepared to fight.

But something more needs to be said about Korea before we can begin to form a judgment about over-all policy. It is that on the whole Asiatic borderland of the Soviet Union until we reach Turkey, Korea was unique in that it was the only threatened country where the United States was in a position to intervene promptly and decisively. For Korea is within close reach of Japan where the United States has, as a force in being and in place, its largest concentration of air, sea, and ground power.

Nowhere else in the world were we able to exert so much power so quickly. Similar concentrations of American power—as great as those which are already at General MacArthur's command—cannot be built up and maintained near all the other places in Asia that are covered by the Truman Doctrine.

That is to say we cannot build up and maintain local forces to contain all the satellites and to resist revolution and insurrection all over Asia if we are not to allow ourselves to be diverted from our own, and the free world's supreme and vital military interest—which is to be strong enough to deter the Soviet Union itself from precipitating a world war.

IT IS imperative that we reverse the tendency in Washington, which is to practice what might be called deficit diplomacy. We need to reduce our political commitments which the political orators are ever ready to expand; we will need to enlarge our military forces in being which the politicians hate to raise taxes to do.

In order to reduce our political liabilities we need particularly to have it precisely and clearly understood—from here on out—by the State Department and the Pentagon and the White House where American expeditionary forces may be landed. That there has been no such understanding — though this is the heart of high policy—the Korean experience with its snap judgments and its improvisations has sharply demonstrated.

To enlarge our active military forces our primary concern must continue to be with developing the power to deter the Soviet Union itself from engaging its own forces. Strategic air power was never designed, let us remember, for a little war against a tenth rate army.

But, secondarily, we will need also to organize,—or to reactivate—mobile task forces that are not anchored to any fixed position which is not indisputably and securely American.

The purpose of the task forces should not be to fight wars inside Asia, not to become involved in ground fighting with land armies and with guerillas. Their purpose should be to help friendly governments, which cannot expect to support navies and air forces, that are helping themselves on their own good earth,—and to support those actions which the United Nations call for.

German Communists

By Marquis Childs

Propaganda Inroads On The West

IF ANY one area of the earth demonstrates more than another the urgent need for an American propaganda of the truth, it is Germany. Reports coming from both the west and the east zones indicate the extraordinary success the Communists are having in building their own propaganda base.

Childs

The pattern of propaganda in East Germany, and to a somewhat lesser degree in West Germany, is very much like that employed by Communist leaders in Korea. This is a fact of great significance with respect to the Moscow timetable for war and conquest.

Basic elements in this pattern are the petitions for peace and against the atomic bomb being circulated by the millions in both zones of Germany. These same petitions were signed by several million North Koreans beginning in 1947 when they were first introduced on orders of Moscow.

The objective is clear. It is to identify communism with peace and to put the United States in the role of aggressor, holding the terror weapon of the atomic bomb over the heads of peace-loving peoples everywhere. If and when the United States should resort to the atomic weapon, on which so much emphasis has been placed in American planning, then the base would be prepared to foment a world-wide hatred of America and Americans.

A PROPAGANDA film prepared for Germany, called, Der Fall von Berlin (The Fall of Berlin), is being shown in both zones. It portrays the Russians as noble liberators saving the people of Berlin from the horrors of nazism.

The Fall of Berlin is believed aimed at the younger generation which was not so aware of the barbarous conduct of Soviet troops immediately after the fall of Berlin. Stalin is the hero and Roosevelt gets a pat on the head. After Hitler and Eva Braun, the villains are Churchill and Truman who are portrayed as desiring to force the German people into bondage once again.

The number of East German Communists infiltrating into West Germany is believed to be greatly on the increase. Among them are espionage agents with specific missions to perform.

But there are also many designated to carry the propaganda line and recruit both men and money in the West for the Communist cause. These agents make liberal use of threats and fear.

The following practice is said to be growing. Two tough guys, Communist agents, will approach a merchant in, say, Frankfurt. They will give him a hard-boiled talk about the inevitability of the triumph of communism and the growing strength of the East German Communist army. The merchant had better make sure that, when the time comes, he is known to be a friend. A secret contribution for the party's work of so many hundreds or thousands of marks a month will take care of that.

THAT THE West Germans are being softened up by this propaganda barrage is a fact that realistic observers readily concede. Here, of course, the specific objetive of Moscow enters in. It is to create a sense of paralyzing fear and hopelessness in the West to prevent any effective resistance to an invading East German army.

It also would help to checkmate any possible plans of the Western allies to build a paramilitary police force in the West zone. Incidentally, some of the glib talkers who seem to think it is only necessary to put weapons into German hands to gain a new source of strength for the West had better look beneath the surface at the attitudes developing in western Germany.

Concerned by present trends, John J. McCloy, American High Commissioner at Frankfurt, pleaded with Congress in March for a greatly increased budget for information and education. From first hand experience with the problem of Germany, McCloy knows the consequences of Communist propaganda.

While the United States has let the opportunity go almost by default, and it is today very late, there is still the possibility to expand American truth-telling in a big way in both Europe and Asia. Senator William Benton of Connecticut enlisted some impressive witnesses for his "Marshall Plan of Ideas." The State Department is proposing a greatly expanded Voice of America.

But the time is so short. And there are still those in high places who seem to think that ideas are of no importance in this crucial struggle between communism and a free world.

FEPC Buried for Session was primarily for record-making purposes in the coming campaign. Administration forces were set to blame it on the so-called Wherry cloture rule adopted by a coalition last year while Republicans will charge the Administration never really wanted to pass an anti-discrimination measure.

Morse Tilts With Wherry

Ironically, the first bout in the fight occurred yesterday between Republicans. Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) blamed the whole civil rights stalemate on the "Wherry rule" and called on Republicans to help repeal it.

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) replied that cloture still would have failed by four votes under the old rule requiring a simple two-thirds majority of those present. He invited Morse to help him "improve" the rule, but said it was still the "best rule" the Senate would take.

Saying 78 percent of Senate Republicans supported cloture, while only 42 percent of the Democrats went along, Wherry later charged in a statement: "The result proved again that the split Democratic Party cannot deliver on its promises."

Senate Administration Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) led the fight for cloture. With Americans of all creeds and races fighting in Korea, he said, the Senate should pass the FEPC bill now to show the world the United States intends to stop economic discrimination at home.

Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.), leader of the Senate's Southern forces, called it a "compulsory jail sentence" civil rights bill. Russell charged it would destroy private property rights and upset industry at a time when it must produce more than ever.

ployes. Brown based his argument on all the trouble the Commerce Secretary had in firing William Remington and Michael Lee.

In addition, the heads of these agencies would be given the sweeping authority: State, Defense, Army, Navy, Air Force, Treasury (in the case of the Coast Guard), Atomic Energy, National Security Resources Board and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

The bill provides that any employe under any of the above officials could be suspended summarily on security charges. A suspended employe would be entitled to (1) a written statement of the charges against him; (2) a reasonable opportunity to answer them, and an opportunity to ask for a hearing; (3) a review of the case by the agency head or his representative, and (5) a written statement by the agency head of the final decision in the case.

Could Appeal to CSC

In addition, a status employe could appeal to Civil Service, but the most he could gain would be its recommendation for his employment in a non-security job in another agency.

Employes who are fired and later cleared and reinstated would be paid for time lost. The President would be given authority to extend the bill to cover employes in all other agencies.

The Senate Armed Forces Committee is reported ready to agree to a similar bill. It has been awaiting action by the House. The Senate group supported a similar bill several years ago.

Earlier yesterday, the House Civil Service Committee unanimously approved a bill to overhaul the Government's method of recruiting and examining employes. In general, the bill is aimed at giving Federal agencies authority to do their own recruiting and examining under standards and policies laid down by CSC.

Power to Suspend

An amendment was added to give the President authority to suspend peacetime Civil Service policies during a national emergency or wartime. Also approved were these amendments:

To recruit high-level scientists, professional and technical employes through tests where participants were rated by "categories" instead of by numerical grades. There would be four possible categories: Outstanding, Well-qualified, Qualified, and Unqualified. Veterans would get preference as usual.

To base promotions throughout Government on merit and efficiency.

Rejected by the committee were amendments to penalize any Federal official who allowed political pressure to influence his choice in filling a job, and to require a veteran to earn a passing grade on a Civil Service test before preference points can be added.

McCarthy Charges State Department Files Were Purged of Data Derogatory to Personnel

By The Associated Press

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) yesterday produced papers which showed, he said, that Government files were stripped in 1946 of all material derogatory to State Department employes.

The State Department issued a denial, terming McCarthy's blast a "characteristic distortion of facts."

The Department said personnel information was culled from its files in 1946 but that the data removed did not deal with loyalty or security matters.

In fact, the agency stated, records of employe loyalty and security "were and are separately maintained in a security division wholly removed from the personnel operation."

McCarthy made the charge of file-stripping in a six-page letter to President Truman.

With the letter he sent four statements he said had been signed by men hired to throw away all discrediting documents.

The letter to Mr. Truman—and photographic copies of the statements—were made public at a news conference.

McCarthy told reporters the alleged file-stripping was done shortly before President Truman's loyalty program started in 1947.

"Why would the State Department find it necessary to strip the files unless the information, when placed before loyalty boards, would have caused the removal of those individuals?" he asked Mr. Truman.

"The stripping was successful to the extent that this Nation was and is being betrayed."

Hits Tydings "Falsehood"

Then McCarthy said:

"Someone in the State Department ordered the files stripped. Who was he? He must be found, Mr. President."

McCarthy also teed off on Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), who heads the committee investigating McCarthy's charges that Communists are in the State Department.

Last week, McCarthy said, Tydings made a "studiously false assertion" when he said the FBI had examined State Department files and found them complete and intact.

McCarthy included a copy of a letter, dated July 10, from J. Edgar Hoover, head of the FBI. In this letter Hoover said in part:

"The Federal Bureau of Investigation has made no such examination and therefore is not in a position to make any statement concerning the completeness or incompleteness of the State Department files."

When newsmen asked Tydings if he had any comment, he first said:

"I don't think I'll bother with that."

Then he turned to the Hoover letter and said:

"Well, the FBI sent the stuff over and the Justice Department studied it."

Statements Read to Senate

Later, McCarthy read the four signed statements to the Senate, and put part of his letter to Mr. Truman in the Congressional Record.

He said he wasn't going to put it all in because he had referred to Tydings "in a way that might be a violation of the Senate rules." This obviously was an allusion to his statement that Tydings had made a "studiously false assertion."

According to McCarthy, the following three men were hired to take out and throw away derogatory information in State Department files:

1. A man who still is in the State Department, and whose name McCarthy therefore withheld. In the statement, this man said:

"All the derogatory material in the files was destroyed or thrown away."

2. Francis Eugene Brien, 25, who now works in a Sears Roebuck store. He said:

"I and the other clerks received instructions orally and by a form paper that we were to go through all the State Department personnel (sic) files and remove all papers, letters, memorandum and reports except administrative forms."

One is Now FBI Agent

3. Paul E. Sullivan, now a student at Georgetown University.

"All the clerks on this project were to pull out of the files all matters considered derogatory either morally or politically."

The fourth statement, McCarthy said, was signed by Burney Threadgill, jr., now an FBI agent. Threadgill didn't work on the files himself, but did typing in an office down the hall.

"This project was very confused, hurried and very little supervision of the clerks," Threadgill said. "I recall talking to one of the other clerks (I can't recall his name at this time) when he told me that he knew some of the employes of the State Department had come to the files and removed derogatory material which was in the file on themselves."

The statements were all in the handwriting of one of McCarthy's investigators. They were signed, but not sworn. McCarthy said the investigator had no authority to take sworn statements.

There was no comment from either the State Department or the White House on McCarthy's letter.

Thurmond Concedes To Johnston

Columbia, S. C., July 12 (AP).—Virtually complete returns today from the South Carolina Democratic primary served to widen United States Senator Olin D. Johnston's victory margin over Gov. J. Strom Thurmond.

The latest figures gave Johnston 178,088, Thurmond 153,554. Only a few precincts still were missing.

While Johnston won renomination as the climax of a bitterly waged campaign, former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes captured the nomination for Governor in a walk-away over three oppenents. Primary nomination assures election in November.

Latest figures gave Byrnes 238,130 votes, Lester A. Bates 60,084, Thomas Pope 28,326, and Marcus Stone 5266.

Thurmond, the 1948 States' Rights Democratic presidential candidate, conceded Johnston's nomination and congratulated him.

Johnston, already back in Washington to vote against the Administration attempt to bring up the FEPC bill, said he accepts "the confidence of the people of South Carolina with humility and grateful appreciation."

FALSE TEETH
That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). D. C. Guard Takes Traffic Safety Step

Fort Miles, Del., July 12 (Spl.).—District National Guard officers today were considering sending heavy vehicles back to Washington a few days before the encampment here ends to avoid accidents with civilian vehicles in heavy weekend traffic.

One such accident last Sunday resulted in the death of Thomas Bayard O'Toole, Delaware mortgage banker, and the injury of O'Toole's wife and chauffeur. A Guard M-4 tractor in a convoy was in collision with O'Toole's car near Milford, Del.

Pfc. Melvin Harrington, 21, of 1701 D st. se., operator of the tractor, has been charged with manslaughter and assault and battery with an automotive vehicle. He was released on $3500 bond after a hearing at Georgetown, Del., yesterday.

The encampment of 1500 Washington Guardsmen here ends July 23, a Sunday.

Guild Member Is Upheld in Right to Sue

A member of the American Newspaper Guild can individually sue the newspaper that employs him, the Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

The decision was made in the case of Miss Tina Marranzano, who sued the Washington Times-Herald to recover about $10,000 damages, alleging she had been fired as a reporter without good and sufficient cause.

Her suit was dismissed in District Court on the grounds that an individual Guild member could not sue and that the terms of the Times-Herald Guild contract did not restrict the newspaper's right to fire employes.

The Court of Appeals also held yesterday that under the terms of the Times-Herald contract, employes can be fired only for "good and sufficient cause."

The Court of Appeals did rule, however, that Miss Marranzano's suit did not state a course of action, and should have been dismissed for that reason.

She did not spell out her complaint that she had been wrongfully discharged without good and sufficient cause, the court said.

"Ordinarily a correct decision of a trial court should be affirmed even though based on an incorrect ground," Judge Wilbur K. Miller wrote in the unanimous opinion.

"The ends of justice would be better served in this case, we think, by remanding it so that appellant may be afforded an opportunity to amend her complaint. If she does not do so, the motion to dismiss should again be granted."

Trend Changes: Jobs Growing Plentiful in Md.

Baltimore, July 12 (AP).—Jobs are getting more plentiful in Maryland. There's even a shortage today of certain skilled workers, Maryland labor officials said.

A sharp reversal of the unemployment trend is reported by the department of employment security.

The rise started last March all over the State with the exception of Cumberland, where job scarcity still is a problem.

The State department said such skilled fields as machinists, tool and die makers, and mechanics are lacking workers. "There is no unemployment now in the building and metal trades," the labor division reported.

Spencer C. Cromwell, director of unemployment compensation, said the number of jobless is dropping steadily. It dropped from 26,000 to 21,000 between June 10 and July 1. That's 15,000 less than were out of work a year ago.

The increased employment is reflected in state cost of unemployment insurance payments. They totaled $2,004,391 in June, a drop of $367,582 from the previous month. A year ago jobless payments cost the state $3,286,418.

"Initial claims filed in June 1950, which represent to a large degree new unemployment during the month, were 12,966 as compared with 20,901 filed in June 1949," the Department of Unemployment Security announced.

Fairfax County Lists Plans for 'Annex' Area

Planned improvements to expedite Fairfax County services to an "annexable" area sought by the City of Falls Church were described by two county officials in Fairfax Court yesterday.

The testimony was introduced in the three-week-old annexation suit to counter Falls Church claims that the county is not adequately equipped to serve the heavily populated urban section to the south, west and east of the city.

Marcel Pfalzgraf, county forest warden, told the three-judge annexation court the county firemen's association plans to erect an additional fire station in the vicinity of Jefferson Village, part of the "annexable area." Plans for the new station have been held up, pending disposition of the annexation suit, since Falls Church also plans for a new firehouse in the area, he said.

R. M. Loughborough, executive secretary of the county, described plans for a new $980,000 addition to the county courthouse to be built with funds approved in a referendum May 30. He said it would coordinate the activities of several county departments, now housed in private offices, and would help improve efficiency of the county's service.

Under cross-examination by Horace H. Edwards, attorney for Falls Church, Loughborough said the courthouse addition would be necessary even if the county loses the annexation suit.

Other witnesses for the county yesterday were Miss Ruth Ashburn, county librarian, who told of services rendered by the county library to the annexation area, and Herbert F. Schumann, jr., director of planning and zoning, who described planning procedures now in effect in the county.

Fear Grips Tiny Virginia Town of 5000 As 17th Epidemic Polio Case Is Reported

Wytheville, Va., July 12 (Spl.)—Polio's numbing fear gripped this trading town today while doctors recorded a seventeenth patient ill of epidemic infantile paralysis.

The dread disease, arising out of apparent nowhere, struck here for the first time since 1944, about two weeks ago, with two separate illnesses. Since then, two victims have died and three to five new cases are now cropping up daily.

Four of the victims, including one who died, contracted the deadly bulbar form of poliomyelitis, which kills half its victims and half-kills those who survive it.

No other cases have been reported in Virginia this year west of the Blue Ridge Mountains, said Dr. C. P. Pope, Wythe County health officer. Thirteen of the county cases have occurred within Wytheville's limits, and the other four in its immediate suburbs.

(Wytheville, population about 5000, lies some 300 miles southwest of Washington, D. C., and 65 miles southwest of Roanoke, Va. The area's principal industries are hosiery and shirt-making mills, quarrying, timber-cutting and diversified farming—Editor's Note).

Yesterday, county and State health officers and representatives of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis conferred here on the situation. Attending were Dr. Albert S. McCown, of the State Health Department; George V. Funderburk, area representative for the NFIP, and Dr. Pope.

Dr. B. A. Wagner, chairman of the Wythe County Chapter, NFIP, announced at the meeting that he had requested $2500 from the Foundation to aid this stricken area. Added requests will be made as needed, he said.

In the absence of specific measures to control the disease generally, Dr. McCown advised all Virginians to avoid unnecessary crowds, to continue normal activities but avoid exhaustive ones, to emphasize cleanliness, to put the patint to bed and call a doctor when illness strikes.

Dr. McCown said the State Health Department had received reports of 10 new cases of polio from throughout the State, for Tuesday. Seven of these were from Wythe County, he said.

As of today, the State's total of new polio cases this year stood at 50, with four deaths recorded. This compares with 19 cases and one death for the same period last year. In Wythe County, the last previous polio infections were recorded in 1944, when 25 cases developed.

Seasonal Polio Toll Is Lower Than 1949

New York, July 12 (AP).—The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis said today there have been 218 fewer cases of polio so far in this "disease year" than in the same period of 1949.

The Foundation said the number of cases since the first of this year is almost exactly the same as for the same period last year—3187 up to July 1 this year as compared with 3186 up to July 2, 1949.

Cases since March 18, the average date when new cases are at the seasonal low point, this year totaled 2053. There were 2271 cases in the same period last year.

Free Mail Bill Signed

President Truman yesterday signed a bill providing free postage for members of the American armed forces in Korea.

Maragon Hospitalized After Fainting in Store

John Maragon was admitted to Doctors Hospital yesterday after he fainted in a Columbia Medical Building drug store while buying medicine.

Dr. W. R. Moses said Maragon was suffering from an intestinal disturbance, but was in good shape. Maragon, free on $5000 bond pending appeal, has been sentenced to serve eight months to two years in prison for lying to the Senate's 5-per-center investigations last year about his bank accounts and employment.

ON RETIREMENT—William T. Teepe, retiring after 50 years service as chief clerk of the District's purchasing division, receives a certificate of merit from District Commissioner J. Russell Young

After 50 Years

Veteran D. C. Worker To Retire

After 50 years service in the District government, William T. Teepe, 69, will retire today as chief clerk of the District Purchasing Division.

In the 49 years he has spent in purchasing work—30 as chief clerk—Teepe figures he has helped process $70,000,000 worth of District supplies.

The other year he spent as a telephone messenger to the Commissioners. That was in 1900 when Teepe worked for Commissioner Henry B. F. Macfarland.

In those days, Teepe recalled, the Commissioners had no outside telephones in their offices—just an interdepartmental line. There was one outside line for the three of them in a separate office, and Teepe spent his time there taking messages or calling one of the Commissioners to come talk on it.

Teepe lives in Washington Grove, Md. He has two children, both of whom are also employed by the city. His son, William K. Teepe, is deputy clerk of Juvenile Court. His daughter, Miss Elizabeth A. Teepe, is a research assistant with the public school system.

District Commissioners yesterday took note of Teepe's retirement and half century of service by awarding him a certificate of merit.

Savings Bonds Fall Short of Quota

A Treasury report showed yesterday that Series E Savings Bond sales for May and June totaled 597 million dollars—10 per cent less than the 654-million-dollar national goal of the May 15-July 4 independence savings bonds drive.

Officials of the Treasury's Savings Bonds Division said, however, that was no sign of a failure to reach the drive quota.

There's Some Good in Them Thar' Starlings

The starling is not a nasty bird . . . entirely.

The Smithsonian Institution has rushed stoutly to the defense of this local yokel to state:

"Everywhere the starling has gone, especially in cities, it is regarded as a nuisance because of its objectionable flocking and roosting habits . . . It is in some respects a highly beneficial species."

The Smithsonian's conclusions come from Arthur Cleveland Bent of Taunton, Mass., who has been studying the starling and discovered it is the "Jekyll and Hyde of the bird world."

"On the whole, its food habits are beneficial to man, although in some localities, starlings may constitute an unmitigated nuisance in some years," the Smithsonian reports.

It eats weevils which destroy grass and forage crops; Japanese beetles which destroy anything; potato beetles and caterpillars.

It doesn't eat any more cherries than any other birds, Bent finds, and furthermore, the starling can mimic:

A barking dog, mewing cat, mockingbird, bobwhite, wood pewee, crow, chickadee, bluebird, kinglet, yellowthroat, English sparrow, meadowlark oriole, grackle, cowbird, goldfinch, robin, wood thrush—and others.

The reason there are so many starlings—or at least one reason, Bent concludes, is that cats catch so few.

Arlington Zone Plan Set For Adoption

A new master zoning plan for Arlington County, under study for almost three years, will "definitely be adopted" Saturday, County Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan said yesterday.

The new zoning plan, which increases apartment-zoned acreage about 1 percent, would become effective early in August, following necessary advertisement of its terms.

The board was scheduled to adopt the new land use map and zoning ordinance in March, but has been delayed in working out minor changes in specific localities.

County Planning Engineer C. L. Kinnier said yesterday that virtually all changes made in the plan since a final public hearing last February have been to more restricted categories, such as residential areas.

12-Year-Old Girl Conscious Again After 58-Day Coma

Tuscon, Ariz., July 12 (U.P.).—Twelve-year-old Patricia Murphy yesterday broke out of the fog that gripped her for 58 days.

She was injured in an auto accident on Mother's Day and has been in a coma ever since. Yesterday she regained consciousness and was taken out on the hospital lawn in a wheel chair.

She was joined by her mother Mrs. Edward Murphy, 32, who is in a wheel chair as result of the same accident. Patricia's maternal grandparents were killed in the crash.

Candidate Goes Too Far

Texarkana, Tex., July 12 (AP).—Casco March, candidate for governor in Texas, went a bit too far in his campaigning yesterday. He crossed the State line in this border city and started speaking to the Arkansas people.

Byrd Tops Senate In Off-Party Votes

Democratic Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia voted against his party more often during the first six months of 1950 than any other Senator, the Congressional Quarterly revealed yesterday.

On strict party line ballots, Byrd voted with the Democratic majority only 44 percent of the time, the survey showed.

In the House, Representative Howard A. Smith (D., Va.) voted with his party only 29 percent of the time on party line ballots, according to the breakdown. Only Representative Usher Burdick (R., N. Dak.) was a "party unity laggard" more often, the Congressional Quarterly said. His percentage was 26.

The survey covered 91 party-line ballots in the Senate and 44 in the House.

Party unity percentages for the other Maryland and Virginia Congressmen, according to the analysis, were:

VIRGINIA (all Democrats): Senator A. Willis Robertson, 67 percent; Representatives, Watkins M. Abbitt, 59; Clarence G. Burton, 65; Tom B. Fugate, 78; J. Vaughan Gary, 62; Porter Hardy, jr., 67; Burr P. Harrison, 39; Thomas B. Stanley, 36; Edward J. Robertson (in the House less than three months), 100.

MARYLAND: Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D.), 66 percent; Senator Millard E. Tydings (D.), 70; Representatives, J. Glenn Beall (R.), 81; William P. Bolton (D.), 63; George H. Fallon (D.), 60; Edward A. Garmatz (D.), 86; Edward T. Miller (R.), 95; Lansdale G. Sasscer (D.), 65.

Judge Casey Suffers Collapse

Municipal Court Judge Walter J. Casey, 53, collapsed in his chambers yesterday morning and was rushed to Emergency Hospital.

At first thought to have suffered a heart attack, Judge Casey was taken to his home in the Westchester Apartments later in the day. Dr. William P. Argy told reporters that the judge was suffering from upset stomach and should return to work shortly.

Judge Casey, a veteran of 15 years on the bench, was resting during a recess in the United States branch of Municipal Court when he was stricken.

Court Order Halts Action On Air Merger

By the United Press

Federal Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut yesterday issued a restraining order halting temporarily further Government action on the merger of American Overseas Airlines and Pan American World Airways.

The order prohibits the Civil Aeronautics Board from taking action until July 19, when the judge will hear arguments to make the order permanent.

President Truman is reported to have approved the merger despite a 3-to-2 CAB vote against it. He has authority to make the final decision since the transaction involves international air traffic.

Schweinhaut said he granted the order at 2:30 a. m. to former CAB Chairman James Landis. He represented a group of AOA and Seaboard and Western Airlines employes who claimed their interests would be damaged.

Civil Defense Setup Sought

defense appropriations request, Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young explained the National Security Resources Board has recently taken the view local civil defense should be "implemented as well as planned."

The House may act today on a bill to authorize establishment of an office of civil defense here.

Sent to "Hill" Yesterday

District officials said the appropriations request was sent to Congress yesterday to insure action on it once the authorization measure is approved as expected.

The $290,000 figure, General Young said, would cover hiring a director and a staff of between 10 and 15, setting up a civil defense office and purchase of "considerable" communications equipment for an "air raid warning net" around the city.

Presidential backing of the Soldiers Home building program represents a reversal of Administration policy over the past several years. Home officials have repeatedly sought authority in their budget to proceed with building plans, but have heretofore been rejected by the Budget Bureau. Last year Soldiers Home proposed a $16,990,000 construction program.

450 Veterans Seek Admission

General Loughry said about 450 war veterans are waiting to be admitted to the home. Plans for the new buildings have been drawn, he said.

A total of $1,678,950 was asked in the supplemental bill for other District expenses. They are:

1. District Rent Control Office—$113,100 to administer the local rent law through next January 31, when it is due to expire unless Congress extends it.

2. Corrections Department—$64,500 to hire an additional 20 guards at Occoquan Workhouse. Officials said the number of inmates has has greatly increased in recent months.

3. Public Schools—$500,000 for an addition to Browne Junior High School, 24th st. and Benning rd. ne., and an extra $280,000 in contract authorization for other school building projects.

$149,726 Sought for Court

4. United States Courts—$149,726 to cover money owed the courts since last year.

5. Recreation Department—$275,000 to compensate the department for taking over operation of the public golf courses from the Interior Department.

6. Executive Office—$6000 for routine administrative expenses.

7.—Educational Surplus Property Agency—$15,000 for administering the newly-created agency.

8. Health Department—$68,500 to repair the 14th st. and Upshur Hospital and to continue it as an adjunct to Gallinger Hospital.

9. Superintendent of District Buildings—$15,000 in operating expenses.

10. Department of Inspections—$9000 for routine expenses.

11. Pay increases for per diem workers—$325,000 for wage adjustments for these part-time employes in line with the recently revised wage scale.

12. Settlement of claims and suits against the District government—$7479, and

13. Auditing purposes—$60,635.

Hormones Revive Vital Organs in Aged

Liege, Belgium, July 12 (U.P.).—Two scientists reported today that they have regenerated vital organs in the animal and human body by injection of sex hormones, leading to belief that man some day may avoid becoming old.

It was reported science already has turned the clock back for some aged women in St. Louis, Mo.

One scientist, Dr. Vladimir Korenchevsky, director of the Oxford gerontology research unit, told of experiments on rabbits, rats and chickens in which he made vital organs of the animals, for instance the liver of an old female rabbit, return to normal size and youthful functions after an injection of a series of hormones.

He found that the injections did not bring back the sex glands, but did regenerate the secondary sexual organs.

The other expert was Dr. William B. Kountz of the Washington University School of Medicine, St. Louis, who said studies with hormone injections already had been carried out on human beings, particularly aged women in St. Louis.

He said the administration of estrogen—a sex hormone that a woman's body fails to produce after a certain age—and a male hormone was followed by some regeneration of at least one secondary sex organ. He identified it as the uterus.

These studies, Dr. Kountz said in a discussion of Dr. Korenchevsky's work with animals, have been carried out at St. Louis for about five years.

Korenchevsky said the hormones used included estradiol, progesterone, thyroid hormone and the male sex hormone that is found naturally to a degree in female animals. The tests were made two to three months after the injection.

AFL and CIO Plan New Try At Unity in Talks Here July 25

By The Associated Press

The AFL and CIO announced yesterday that they will start a new series of "unity" talks on July 25, their first since May, 1947.

In a joint statement, the two big labor organizations that split apart in bitterness during the 1930s merely gave the date and the place—Washington—and listed their spokesmen who will meet to talk about merging, or cooperating more closely.

AFL President William Green and CIO President Philip Murray will head the delegations.

Other AFL men: Charles McGowen of the Boilermakers, Dan Tobin of the Truck Drivers, and Dan Tracy of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Other CIO men—Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey, Vice President Allan S. Haywood, and five other vice presidents, Walter Reuther of the Auto Workers; Joe Curran of the Maritime Workers; Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers; Frank Rosenblum of the Clothing Workers, and L. S. Buckmaster of the Rubber Workers.

During years of attempts to get the AFL and CIO together again, the same big stumbling blocks always brought failure:

The CIO wanted to establish working unity—cooperation in political action and other things—before undertaking organic unity. The AFL would not enter a working unity until organic unity had been achieved.

Organized labor already is working together in one matter. It formed a committee of nine men yesterday to meet further with W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board (NSRB), following up a luncheon meeting with him Tuesday.

On the comittee, the AFL named Green, George L. Meany and George M. Harrison. The CIO named Reuther, Rieve and Jacob S. Potofsky. The United Mine Workers named John L. Lewis. The Machinists named Al Hayes and G. E. Leighty will represent the railroad brotherhoods.

Railroad Yardmasters Agree To Hold Up Strike Action Now

Chicago, July 12 (U.P.).—Railroad yardmasters joined conductors and trainmen today in withholding strike action because of the Korean war.

President M. G. Schoch of the AFL Railroad Yardmasters followed the lead of the larger Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and Order of Railway Conductors in setting aside the strike weapon, for the time being at least.

Schoch sent President Truman a telegram, however, rejecting settlement recommendations of a Presidential fact-finding board in the railroad wage and hour dispute.

But he promised to keep 4000 yardmasters on the job while a further attempt is made to negotiate a settlement with the railroads.

The union, which represents key yard employes on 66 roads, would be legally free to strike under the Railway Labor Act July 15.

Schoch referred to the fact-finding board's refusal to recommend the five-day work week for yardmasters on the same terms and conditions it was granted to other non-operating railroad employes last September. He said the board's actions were a "disgrace."

Spotty Signs Of War-Scare Buying Noted

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Korean war hasn't caused any abnormal demand as yet for loans to build up inventories, Washington bankers reported yesterday.

As a rule, bankers here appear to be discouraging unusual extensions of credit at this time, feeling that business should be kept as close to normal as possible.

They report "spotty signs" of war-scare buying, but little on a large enough scale to warrant bank loan applications. Here are a few cases that were unusual enough to be related by local bankers.

A television dealer one morning wanted a loan to stock up about $200,000 worth of TV sets and tubes. He feared the war might cause a shortage. By afternoon he had cooled down and canceled his credit application. He realized, the banker said, that the Government isn't likely to allow big wartime profits and that excess profits tax would be reestablished.

One character asked a loan to purchase four autos "to store them and sell later when autos become scarce." The business was refused curtly.

Then there was the panicky individual who wanted a $4000 loan as "a life and death matter." It seemed he wished to make habitable his summer home in Connecticut so he could get his family out of Washington.

A laundry operator asked to borrow several thousand dollars to stock up with machinery parts. During the last war, he explained, his laundry suffered costly delays during breakdowns while waiting days for replacement parts.

One of the larger banks here reported "a recent rash of small loan applications", and was inclined to lend a sympathetic ear. These credit requests were from individuals who don't want to be caught short with wheezing 20-year-old refrigerators and 10- to 15-year-old autos that are gasping their last breaths.

As one banker put it: "Businessmen and individuals are doing some hard thinking and worrying right now about rising commodity prices and the possibility of war-created shortages. But there hasn't been any rush here to get credit for overstocking purposes."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, July 12 (AP).—Grains ended on a mixture of plus and minus signs today after a session of conflicting trends.

The market did not seem to know which way to go. It sold off early on bumper crop prospects but staged a couple of mild rallies on Korean developments. About 30 minutes before the end of the day's best rally started, but at the close the market was going down again.

Wheat closed ⅛-⅜ lower, corn ½ lower to ¾ higher, oats ⅜-1¾ lower, rye ½-1½ higher, soybeans ½-1¾ higher and lard 10 to 23 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Enlistment Interest Has Upsurge Here

More than 60 Washingtonians flocked to the combined Army-Air Force recruiting station, 403 10th st. nw., in a four-hour period last night to inquire about the Army's Enlisted Reserve Corps.

Officials at the station said the crowd was "far more than we have had at any time." Some of the prospective applicants left because of the length of the waiting line.

Meantime, the Marine Corps called for veterans and reservists to volunteer for a year's active duty.

The Marine Corps said the veterans and reservists are needed until new recruits "can be brought up to combat efficiency."

Involved in the call were privates, corporals and sergeants, but the recruiting office here said quotas for Marine reservists above the rank of sergeant and for women Marine veterans could be expected soon.

To encourage volunteers, the Marines lowered physical requirements in two classifications:

1. Prospects need not have color perception.

2. Prospects with dental deficiencies will be accepted providing immediate treatment is not necessary.

At the Washington recruiting office of the Corps yesterday, 40 men applied and 11 were accepted. While the number of applicants was greater Monday and Tuesday, recruiting officers said yesterday's applicants were better qualified.

The Navy yesterday reported 20 applicants for the Regular Navy; one volunteer for active duty in the reserves; 10 applicants for the enlisted Naval Reserve, and 77 inquiries concerning Naval Reserve commissions. Sixteen applicants of the last few days were accepted in the Regular Navy; two enlistments in the reserve were accepted.

The Army-Air Force station's total for the day was 94 applicants for Army and Air Force enlistments.

The Air National Guard said inquiries have been running 60 percent above normal, most of the applications coming from former Air Force men. Ten have been accepted in four days.

The National Guard reported "fairly heavy" inquiries—10 to 15 a day compared to two to three before the Korean situation developed.

The Coast Guard reported that it has been having "at least" twice as many inquiries in the last few days.

Williams Breaks Elbow, Feared Out for Season

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

LET'S FACE IT, men. No longer is there a push-over National League to do a quick fold-up against an American League team whether it be in a World Series or an All-Star game. The N. L. has a new set of muscles, after a long time no sinew, and there are positive signs of an A. L. decline.

That All-Star team that put the slug on the American Leaguers at Chicago Tuesday was loaded with the kind of ball players that, alas, the A. L. used to boast. The National has caught up, it seems, and even surpassed the American League.

POVICH

Even though the N. L. is 25 years older than the American, you might say it is just now coming of age in the furious inter-league battling. They've come up with the Kiners, the Musials, the Jackie Robinsons, the Schoendiensts, Sauers, Sislers and Campanellas, while the defections in A. L. power ranks are now obvious.

Sure, the American League has come up with such as Walt Dropo and Hoot Evers, and Larry Doby, but not yet are they to be classed with the kind that used to overpower the National League.

THE AMERICAN LEAGUE hasn't replaced the fellows who used to club the N.L. into submission—Hank Greenberg, Jimmy Foxx, Joe Di Maggio, Tommy Henrich, Bill Dickey and Lou Boudreau and Rudy York and Joe Cronin. Di Maggio and Henrich are still around, but at the end of their tether, and those stand-out A. L. pitchers like Gomez, Grove, Ruffing are gone, and such as Feller and Newhouser are past their peak.

At Comiskey Park, the N. L. poured it on, not only with those two home runs, by Kiner that tied it up in the ninth, and Schoendienst who won it in the fourteenth. They showed the A. L. pitching—by Jim Konstanty, Larry Jansen and Ewell Blackwell—that was quite wondrous. Konstanty and Jansen and their sliders had A. L. hitters groping for even a loud foul as they struck out two per inning over a four-inning span.

In defeat, a magnificent figure of the game was Tommy Henrich, who everybody calls the Old Pro, because he is one. Pinch-hitter Henrich got up off the ground after a pitch by Blackwell that almost sheared his head off and made him blanch. But for only a moment. He grabbed his bat again, completely composed, and hit the next pitch for the hardest wallop of the day only to be robbed by Andy Pafko's great catch near the right center scoreboard.

BUT THE National League had its answer for Henrich, in the old pro division. He is Enos (Country) Slaughter, a performer in Henrich's mold, who recognizes no odds. It was Slaughter who struck the first important blow for the N. L., a triple off the left center wall that figured in their 2-0 lead, and then in the unfamiliar position of center field scrambled back to the wall to cheat Walt Dropo of a triple with the fanciest catch of the day.

The luckiest guy in the ball game was Burt Shotton, the N. L. manager, who would have had a time explaining the logic of his strategy had not the home runs of Kiner and Schoendienst got him off the hook. Shotton lapsed into absurdity when, in the eighth inning with a run needed to tie, he permitted Jansen to bat for himself, and then jerked him as the N. L. pitcher without benefit of a pinch-hitter.

Shotton was a lucky stiff in another respect, or else he must be ascribed a special kind of genius, which latter must be doubted. Anyway, he pulled his league's leading hitter, Jackie Robinson, in extra innings when the N. L. needed hitting above all, and replaced him with Schoendienst, who isn't a .300 hitter. That looked very bad, until, of all things, Schoendienst hit the game-winning homer.

THERE WAS little glory for either of the managers, in fact. Neither did Casey Stengel distinguish himself with his direction of his A.L. cast, particularly in the late innings when his manipulations found him bereft of the guys most likely to break up the ballgame—Williams, Dropo and Evers.

In the extra innings, the A. L. was operating with such comparatively weak hitters as Gerry Coleman and Jim Hegan, and a tired Phil Rizzuto, while such as Vern Stephens and Sherman Lollar couldn't get into the lineup. The A. L. went down to defeat with its power already in the dressing room, or uncalled-on in the dugout.

It was good that the N. L. won the game, and its victory ought to be ungrudged after all those poor devils have been through in the All-Star series. It wasn't any fluke victory. The American League is reminded that its big-shot stars are getting old, and there are now two big leagues, again.

Fairfax Ex-Model Started It

Now It Can be Told: Gussie Wasn't First With Lace Panties

By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post and Associated Press

VIRGINIA LEE BOYER TAKES A DIM VIEW OF GUSSIE MORAN'S LACE PANTIES

Windy London Day Exposed Virginia Boyer's Creation

By Gordon Beard

A BROKEN wedding engagement and a windy London day saved the world from a sartorial catastrophe.

Without them, tennis fans probably would have never seen Gorgeous Gussie Moran's lace panties which, according to those who know lace panties best, are quite a sight, even on a calm day.

This strange series of events produced the most talked about development in feminine tennis circles, only it didn't happen to Georgeous Gussie.

From the slew of pictures of her in those eye-filling lacy things, you'd think the Moran gal owned the only lace panties in the tennis world. You're wrong. She's not the only girl ever to wear lace panties (for playing tennis), she wasn't even the first.

That distinction belongs to winsome Virginia Lee Boyer, former Boston clothes model, who happens to be right here in our midst, playing in the Mid-Atlantic tournament at Kenwood Golf and Country Club.

When Virginia, who now lives in Fairfax, sailed for England last fall following a broken marriage engagement, she included in her wardrobe a pair of lace pink panties, once a part of her trousseau.

Helen Rihbany, twelfth-ranking woman tennis player in the Nation, accompanied Virginia and as "chaperone" advised her to wear panties with her divided skirt tennis outfit on that windy London day.

TEDDY TINGLE, English dress designer, happened to be in the stands at Buckingham that day.

After viewing the matches, and Virginia's lace panties, Tingle said her outfit was "the most perfect I have ever seen, for it has a divided skirt which doesn't sag. The most attractive thing about the outfit, however, is the lace panties."

Realizing the business possibilities, Tingle soon designed several pairs of panties which "Gussie" wore two weeks later in the All-England Wimbledon tournament and achieved subsequent fame.

Virginia, lace panties pioneer that she was, considered the publicity la Moran received undesirable and permitted Gussie to have the lace panties field to herself.

"Gussie looks better in them than I do," she explained yesterday.

Ted Injured In All-Star Tilt; Vollmer Subs for Him

Boston, July 12 (AP).—The Red Sox' pennant chances, already shackled with an eight-game deficit; suffered a bruising jolt today as X-rays disclosed Ted Williams has a fracture in the left elbow.

The bugaboo jinx of exhibition games sneaked up on the slugger yesterday in the first inning of the All-Star game in Cominskey Park, Chicago. Ted crashed into the left field wall after hauling down a drive off the bat of Ralph Kiner, National League home run king.

Surgeons will operate tomorrow to remove a bone fragment. The pessimistic pronouncement of the club physician, Dr. Ralph McCarthy, was: He hoped Ted would be back in the lineup before the season ends.

Manager Steve O'Neill's only comment today as he put the team through a practice session in preparation for a 13-game home stand at Fenway Park was that Clyde Vollmer would play left field tomorrow night against the Chicago White Sox.

Vollmer Bats No. 3

Used mostly in pinch-hitting roles since he was acquired earlier in the season from the Washington Senators, the right-handed Vollmer will bat in Williams' No. 3 spot.

Ted played for eight innings yesterday although he hurt his arm in the first frame. He knocked in a run to put the American League in a temporary lead and grabbed another Kiner slam in the third inning.

After he was removed by American League Boss Casey Stengel, Ted went to the locker room and told Packy Schwartz, Chicago White Sox trainer, his elbow was paining.

Schwartz worked on him for 30 minutes and then said: "He'll be O. Kf!"

Williams grimaced during the massage and indicated he wasn't so sure. He flew back to Boston last night, and when he went to the hospital this morning X-rays proved he was right.

Dr. McCarthy said the pictures showed a fracture of the head of of his left radius—a bone in the elbow. Orthopedic Surgeon Joseph Shortell will remove the fragment tomorrow morning at Sancta Maria Hospital, Cambridge.

Dr. Shortell described the injury as "very serious" and "very painful" and said Williams may have to undergo two operations.

"There is a possibility of a secondary operation to take out the whole head of the bone," the surgeon said. "What we will do tomorrow is a conservative thing. We hope we can get away with it."

Dr. Shortell said X-rays showed "a portion of a bone appears impacted and displaced—that is, pushing down into bigger bone."

The surgeon said that although the injury is quite common among non-athletes—"much the same as one caused by a person falling on his outstretched hand"—he said it is "very apt to affect use of the left arm."

Williams' batting average—low for him—is .321, but he is up among the leaders in other departments. He leads the American League in runs scored with 76. He is tied with teammate Walt Dropo in runs batted in, with 83. He is tied in home runs, 25, with Al Rosen of Cleveland, and has 22 doubles, one fewer than League Leader George Kell of Detroit.

Ted's Injury Recalls Dean's All-Star Blow

New York, July 12 (AP).—Another great baseball player, Dizzy Dean of the St. Louis Cardinals, preceded Ted Williams in the All-star game broken bone set.

Dean suffered a broken toe in the 1937 game at Washington when Earl Averill of Cleveland, hit it with a batted ball.

After that, Dizzy never regained the form that made him the best pitcher of the mid-thirties. Dean's arm went bad because of the unnatural throwing motion he had to assume while favoring the toe.

'Boxer' LaMotta Whips Mitri Easily; Ike Williams Upset

Sugar Costner, 3 to 1 Underdog, Gives Champion Thrashing

Philadelphia, July 12 (AP).—George (Sugar) Costner scored the fistic upset of the year tonight by thrashing Lightweight Champion Ike Williams to gain an unanimous 10-round decision before 9809 at Shibe Park. Costner weighed 148 and Killiams 143 for the nontitle scrap.

The lanky Costner hit Williams with everything but the ringposts, but was unable to floor the plucky 135-pound king.

Williams, rated as one of the best fighters—pound for pound—in the ring today, never had a chance after the hard punching Costner clipped him with a vicious left hook in the third round.

Judge Frank Knarsborough gave Costner all 10 rounds while Judge Lou Tress and Referee Dave Beloff carded eight rounds for Costner and two for Williams. The Associated Press voted eight rounds to Costner, one to Williams and one even.

Costner was a 3 to 1 underdog in the betting and in pre-fight reports was considered as a stepping stone to a welterweight championship fight for Williams.

But the Camden, N. J., Negro apparently didn't read the papers. He tore after Williams from the opening bell and never let up until the final gong.

Costner, winner of 91 fights in 98 outings, really won the fight in the third round. He set Williams up with a left hook and then pounded the champion with rights and lefts.

Williams' legs buckled and he went down under the flurry of blows, but managed to tie up the onrushing Costner against the ropes. From that point on Williams seemed to have lost his reflexes and was a standup target for one of the hardest punching welters in the ring.

16,000 See Jake Outclass Italian in First Title Defense

New York, July 12 (U.P.).—Jake LaMotta, "the Bronx bull," turned boxing master tonight and kept his world middleweight crown by winning a lop-sided unanimous 15-round decision over young Tiberio Mitri of Italy at Madison Square Garden.

LaMotta forsook his usual wild-hooking, slam-bang attack to give the most polished performance of his career as he spoiled handsome young Mitri's twenty-fourth birthday, nearly perfect record and formerly unblemished profile.

It was the brown-haired challenger's first defeat in 53 professional bouts.

Although tonight's title scrap was one of the most criticized in advance in many years, it drew 16,369 fans who paid $99,841. No television and no broadcasting unquestionably helped.

Mitri Almost Out

Mitri took a severe battering and was practically "out" on his feet in the ninth and tenth rounds. He was groggy in several other sessions. Nevertheless, the amateurish scrapper from Trieste was the stronger at the finish. He battered the champion from rope to rope in the thirteenth round, and had the better of their exhausted exchange in the fifteenth.

The crowd, which included Gov. Tom Dewey of New York State, gave the young invader an ovation for his display of ruggedness, despite his lack of punch and ringguile.

Mitri was bleeding from gashes beneath both eyes, and his right eye was swollen nearly shut when he climbed down from the ring. LaMotta was bleeding from a gashed upper lip and from the nose.

No Knockdowns

LaMotta, 29, was exhausted at the finish, and he had slowed up considerably in the last three rounds. His ordeal of paring down to the 160-pound limit for the first time in 13 months had weakened him somewhat. However, his greater experience and his harder punching had enabled him to pile up enough rounds in the early going to win by a wide margin. There were no knockdowns.

Referee Mark Conn scored 12 rounds for LaMotta; three for Mitri. Judge Joe Angello favored LaMotta nine rounds to six, and Judge Bert Grant scored it 8-7 for LaMotta. The United Press gave LaMotta 10, Mitri 2, and scored three even.

Mitri, the best middleweight in Europe, surprised boxing experts by his inability to block or slip a left jab. He had not displayed that weakness in his only previous American fight against light heavyweight Dick Wagner in May. Tonight it seemed LaMotta couldn't miss Tiberio with left jabs. Those jabs knocked the challenger off balance again and again and then LaMotta followed with sweeping rocks to body or head.

Redskins Send Dick Poillon To Baltimore

The Washington Redskins will have a new punter next fall.

Halfback Dick Poillon, who's been doing the kicking since Sammy Baugh gave up the chore in 1948, was traded to the Baltimore Colts yesterday.

In exchange for the 29-year-old veteran from Astoria, Long Island, the Redskins get the Colts' tenth choice in the National Football League's 1951 draft.

Halfbacks Bill Dudley and Hall Haynes, the latter a rookie from Santa Clara, will share the Redskins punting duties and 35-year-old Baugh, once the league's best kicker, may even be called on, Coach Herman Ball said.

For extra point chores, jack-of-all-football-trades Dudley will be the man.

Poillon averaged 40.9 yards last year and 42.9 in punting for the Redskins since 1948. Poillon played in 54 games for the Redskins and holds the team's point scoring record with 10 touchdowns, 20 field goals and 127 extra points for a total of 257 points.

He's 29 years old, attended Canisius College and had been with the Redskins longer than any player except Baugh.

Major Raley Holds Lead in Army Golf

Maj. M. L. Raley of the Army Security Agency, maintained his lead in the Military District of Washington Golf Tournament yesterday by shooting a 76 on the Fort Belvoir, Va. course.

His 54-hole total is 227, one less than Maj. General Floyd L. Parks, Army public information officer.

Parks fired the best round of the day, a 75, to pick up one stroke on the leader. The runnerup equalled par on each of the first nine holes for an outgoing 36, then posted a 39 while playing in the rain on the back nine.

Pvt J. R. Brown of Fort Belvoir, tied with Parks before yesterday's round, soared to an 81 and a 234 total. The final 18 holes will be played today.

The leaders after 54 holes are:

Laurel Ends Meet Tonight

Lord Steward, Guy Crippen's Hambletonian hopeful, was the victim of a resounding $33 upset scored by Ed Myer's Leo Hanover last night in Laurel Raceway's next to last feature.

The track that inaugurated harness racing in Maryland in 1948 closes out its third season tonight.

Plagued by bad weather all week and even rained out of one of its racing nights, Laurel still figures to do all right. If $199,356 go through the mutuel machines on the last eight-race card, Laurel will surpass last season's total of $5,274,089. The average has been around a quarter of a million.

Leo Hanover, handled capably by Trainer Myer, trotted the featured mile in 2.06, only one fifth of a second off the track record, to turn back Lord Steward, even-money choice.

There were 93 daily double winners in the crowd estimated at 6500 and they collected $104.20 on the 6-5 combination. Eureka Hanover ($29.40) and Great Sandy ($7) did the honors.

Here's Hoping Runs 1:34 4/5 Mile

Kuzava Hurts Pitching Hand

Consuegra Faces Tigers Here Tonight

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The league-leading Detroit Tigers, with unfond recollections of their last encounters with the Nats, move into Griffith Stadium tonight to be confronted again with Senor Sendalio Consuegra.

The little senor was one of the three pitchers who mopped up the Tigers late last month in a three-game series in Briggs' Stadium, his contribution being an elegant five-hitter.

But Bucky Harris' pitching program for the jousts with the Tigers was knocked askew when Southpaw Bob Kuzava, currently his most solid man, suffered a painful injury to his pitching hand when struck by a line drive in a workout yesterday.

Kuzava was hit on the heel of his left hand, below the thumb, by a fiery smash off the bat of Johnny Ostrowski, and quickly rushed into the x-ray room. The pictures showed no fracture, but the lower thumb joint is swollen and he is expected to miss at least one pitching turn. Harris had planned to work him in the third game of the series.

The possibility now is that Harris will give the Tigers a completely Cuban pitching diet, with Conrado Marrero scheduled to work tomorrow night, and the Nats' latest acquisition, Rogelio Martinez, perhaps slated for Saturday.

Harris got his first look yesterday at Martinez in the Griffith Stadium workout, and was dismayed to learn that he had not pitched for 20 days, after hurting his knee on a slide into third base at Havana. The stocky Cuban pronounced himself ready, however.

Martinez warmed up for Harris, and the Nats' manager was impressed with his fast ball. He's the biggest of the Cubans, and Harris learned from Interpreter Roberto Ortiz that Martinez came up from Havana with a record of 10 wins, four losses.

Consuegra, who pitched in the same league with Martinez, bravely mustered some of his scant English to comment, "He gude peetcher." When Harris, by signs and otherwise, asked Consuegra, "Is he as good a pitcher as you are?" the fellow smiled and shook his head negatively.

The Tigers, with a new kind of respect for the Nats, are expected to pitch either Hal Newhouser or Freddie Hutchinson in tonight's game. If it is Hutchinson, then Griffith Stadium fans may sit in on Gil Coan's return to the Nats' lineup.

Coan took a long workout yesterday, and declared he is no longer suffering the headaches from his skull fracture of more than a month ago.

Ike Junior Wakes Up at Charles Town After 28 Losses in Row

Bill Bennings . . .

AT CHARLES TOWN

DEAR FOLKS:

Apprentice Doyle Gardner was released from the hospital but Jockey J. Regalbuto must await the outcome of x-rays. Regalbuto had slight head pains. The boys went down in the Tuesday first-race spill. The local running surface hasn't been termed "heavy" since the soil was changed. The present mixture won't cling to hooves. Don't forget the ball game at the local ball park, starting at 6:30 p. m., Jockeys vs. Mutuel Clerks with the money going to help the American Legion install a lighting system at the diamond. Clerks are 9-5 favorites. Ray Haight turned down an offer to do the public address at Denver's new track to return to Wheeling. Ray Arduini may end up the top rider here. The Washington boy trails Palumbo's 10 by three winners.

1st Victory In 2 Years Worth $32

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., July 12.—Douglas Burgess jr's Like Junior, unable to reach the winners' circle in 28 tries over a two-year period, forgot to stop today and won the Uniontown Purse, much to the delight of longshot players in a crowd of 5000.

With Apprentice Joe Servis up, Ike Junior sprang his surprise to the tune of a $32 win mutuel and led the favorite, C. F. Bradford's Hy, into the wire by a length margin. A neck further back came Mrs. R. N. Boerner's Fashion Hit to be third in the field of 10.

Ike Junior wrestled the lead from By Me on the backstretch and held sway thereafter under a neat bit of handling by young Servis. Hy went to the outside to make her move and closed willingly enough to take the place money from Fashion Hit, one who hung after coming from far out of it. The winner was clocked in 1.22 2/5 over a good track.

The fifth race, the day's second best offering, went to Mrs. D. N. Lee's Jolly Star, a $9 shot ridden by Jockey F. D. Rivera. The finish was a thriller with Alan Clarke's Lillian Clarke and G. G. Waugh's jr's Wheaten, closing in on the winner at the wire.

The 1 and 1 combination was the favorite in the daily double and returned $13.20. The Washington-owned Flamingo Farm's Kapok, ridden by C. Martinez, won the first race at $6 and the Washington-owned S. H. Rogers' Halogi at $4.20 took the second under Johnny Tammaro's riding.

Bogley Ousted by Shea After Disputed Point, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4

Gil Loses Argument, Plays Poorly

All seeded men advanced to the quarterfinals of the Middle Atlantic tennis championships at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club yesterday, although three were extended to full three sets by unranked foes.

The day's closest match was between eight-seeded Gil Shea, University of Southern California, and Gil Bogley, Washington's 1949 national junior champion, with Shea squeezing out a 2-6, 6-3, 6-4 victory.

Losing 30-40 in the ninth game of the third set, Bogley fired a passing shot to Shea's backhand, the ball falling close to the sideline. Before calling his decision on the play, the umpire asked both players to help him decide the point.

Fans behind the court joined in the ensuing argument before the umpire finally called the shot out, giving Shea the lead, 5—4. A disgruntled Bogley all but threw the final game to lose the match.

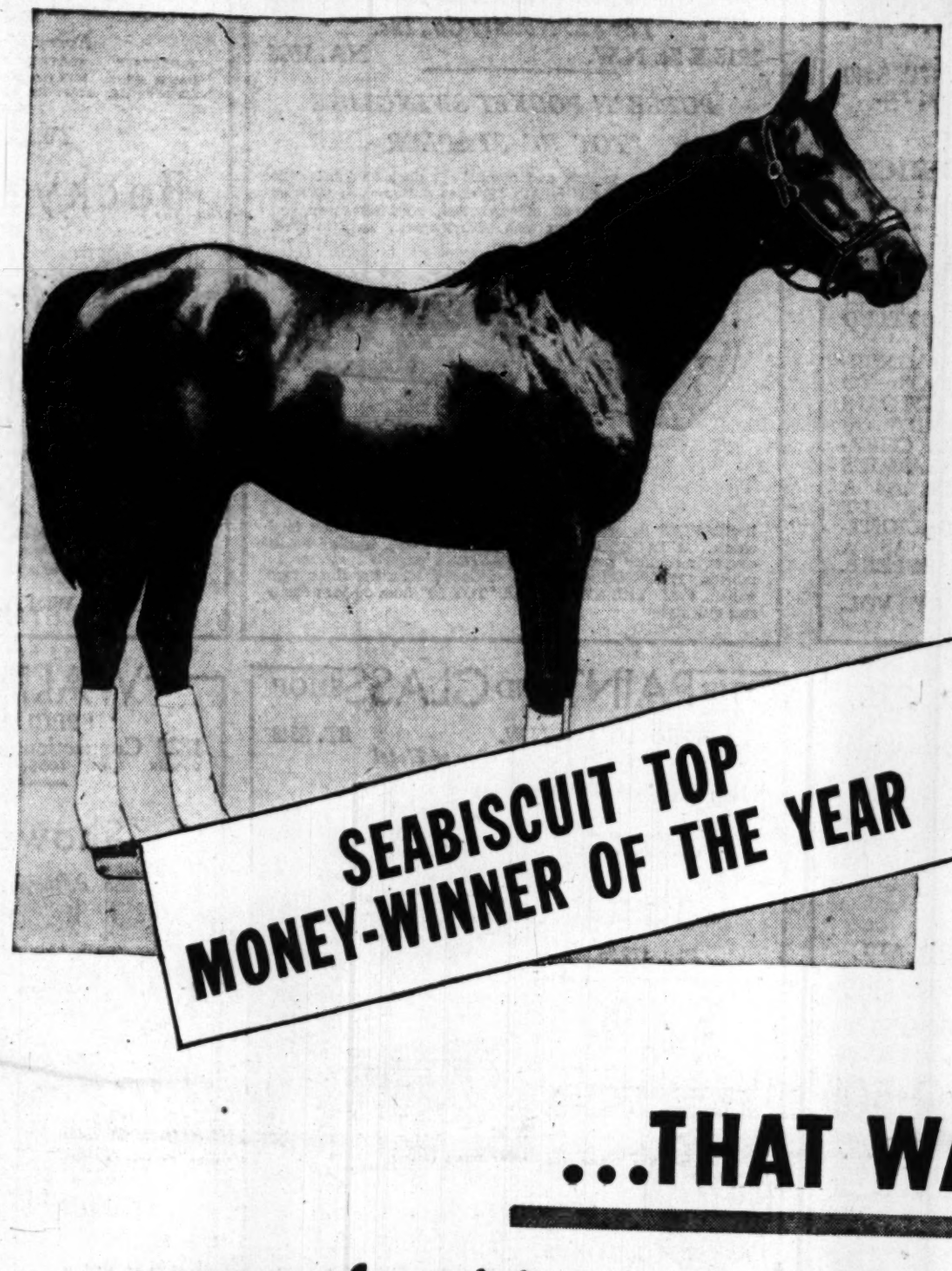
FIRE AT PIMLICO RACETRACK



SEABISCUIT TOP MONEY-WINNER OF THE YEAR

MADRID, SPAIN BOMBED

...THAT WAS 1937!

...a year of exciting news and sport upsets...and in Washington Gunther's changed Beer Tradition with a dry, beer-y beer...today the most imitated beer in the East!

ASK FOR CONVENIENT EASY-TO-CARRY HAND-i 6-PAKS IN CANS

BACK IN 1937, the Gunther Brewing Company brewed a special dry lager, a delicious, light, dry, beer-y beer . . . unlike any beer brewed in this part of the country.

It became the first premium dry beer to be advertised in the U. S. A. following Repeal!

While other brewers belittled this lighter, drier, brew . . . beer drinkers by the thousands switched to Gunther's!

It finally reached a point where during the war more Maryland people asked for Gunther's first than for all other beers combined!

Naturally, Gunther's couldn't supply the demand. Three times, the brewing capacity of Gunther's was enlarged. And last summer Gunther's still had to ration its beer.

Of course, you know what happened.

The same brewers who belittled Gunther's Dry Beer in 1937 are now spending millions of dollars to say that they, too, have a "dry" beer for sale.

In fact, Gunther's is the most imitated beer in the East . . . if not in the whole U. S. A.

Some of the largest breweries in the East followed Gunther's with a dry beer. And one by one, breweries in other cities have produced and advertised a beer like Gunther brews.

And most Washington folks, we believe, would rather drink the original, famous, dry, beer-y Gunther's!

That's why Gunther's has built a whole new brewery . . . with nearly four times the capacity of the Gunther brewery that first made the dry, beer-y beer!

Korean War Halts Senate $18 Million Office Annex

Vote of 45 to 35 Postpones Start Of Building for At Least a Year

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

By a 45-to-3 vote, the Senate decided late yesterday to postpone starting its long-planned 18-million-dollar office building annex for at least another year.

The grim news from the Korean front was the principal reason for the vote.

The Senate Appropriations Committee had recommended a 10 million dollar fund to begin construction of the building on Government-owned land just east of the present Senate Office Building.

Ellender Led Fight

The move to kill the project was led by Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.), who last year spearheaded a similar drive against the project on economy grounds.

The vote to delay construction was urged by Senators Holland (D., Fla.), Lehman (D., N. Y.) and Thye (R., Minn.), who told their colleagues they were 100 percent for the project, but thought the expenditure could not be justified in the light of the Korean crisis and mounting military outlay.

Too Many Luxury Items

Ellender has taken the position the present blueprints call for too many luxury items in the proposed annex. "It should be strictly a utility building," he maintained.

After impassioned Korean war and need-for-economy speeches from both sides of the aisle, the Senate voted to call off the entire undertaking for this year at least.

Incensed by the turn-down, Senator Chavez leading proponent of the project, asked for reconsideration of a 12 million dollar Federal payment to the District, approved by the Senate Tuesday.

If the Senate wants economy, Chavez shouted, it should start right here in the District. The Chavez motion to reconsider was not debatable, and the Senate quickly killed it by voice vote.

Conferees Spar Over D. C. Budget

House conferees on the District budget for this fiscal year are withholding consent to big Senate increases for public works improvements and medical care here as a club to force cuts in other city operating expenses.

This became apparent yesterday as Senate and House conferees quit until Monday the task of working out the final compromise figure for this year's municipal spending program.

The House voted 113 million dollars which the Senate increased to 119 million.

In round figures, about four of the six-million-dollar spread is accounted for by Senate-approved hikes for these purposes:

Starting the authorized E. St. bridge; expansion of the city water supply system; continuing the Piney Branch relief sewer project; increasing the District's payment to private hospitals for care of charity patients; providing more money for St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Representative Joe E. Bates (D., Ky.), chairman of the House Subcommittee on District Appropriations, told a reporter after yesterday's meeting:

"At my request, we have put off taking up these large items until the end. We are now horsetrading on the smaller, more routine items down the line in the District departments."

While the House group is expected to agree to the bridge, water and sewer projects, a House observer predicted a fight over the $245,000 Senate mark up for private hospitals.

Woman Store Manager Beaten By Man Who Bought a Knife

The 42-year-old woman manager of a jewelry shop yesterday was severely beaten by a man who dragged her to the rear of her husband's store after he had purchased a knife.

She is Mrs. Muriel Goldberg of the Annapolis Hotel. Police believe her attacker was going to rob the store after he had beaten Mrs. Goldberg, but was frightened off by the return of an employe.

Mrs. Goldberg said the man, about 26, came into Goldberg's Jewelers Exchange, 434 9th st. nw., at about 1 p. m. and spent 10 minutes picking out a balanced throwing knife. He then asked for a scout knife and, as Mrs. Goldberg was wrapping his second purchase, he grabbed her and dragged her across the floor to a rear room.

Mrs. Goldberg said he threw her to the floor, wrapped a towel around her neck and tried to choke her, and hit her over the head with an instrument case.

When a store employe, Benjamin F. Perry, 55, of 126 O st. sw. came into the store, the youth was walking toward the front with blood on his clothing. He fled when Perry tried to question him.

Mrs. Goldberg was taken to Emergency Hospital where physicians took eight stitches in her cheek, forehead and right hand.

Cretan Gift Goat Due Soon For a Celibate Life at Zoo

Unless in the crags of mountainous Crete some quick-witted hunter spots a female of the species aegagrus cretensin, Kri-Kri—gift goat extraordinary to the United States—is doomed to be a bachelor.

Such was the outlook for Kri-Kri yesterday in Athens, three days before his departure for the United States and, in all probability, a life of celibacy at the National Zoological Park here.

Director William M. Mann announced firmly that he would not associate such a rare goat as Kri-Kri with some unrare domestic goat, howsoever female.

Finding of even one aegagrus cretensis—he's been called an "agrimi," but we'll come to that—was something of a zoological miracle. Chap by the name of Eftikos Protopapadakis in Crete happened to see something that looked like an animal, took it home, and there was Kri-Kri.

Eftikos' find trickled down to Athens and ECA. Cretans thought it would be swell for Greek-American relations to give the United States Kri-Kri as a symbol of gratitude for ECA aid.

ECA agreed—if the specimen was not just an agrimi.

Explaining this point here yesterday, John H. Tobler, chief overseas liason officer for ECA, said that "agrimi" simply means "wild" in Greek.

So ECA sent Dr. Harilaos Hadjisarantos, superintendent of the zoological museum at the University of Athens, to make sure.

With 10 pages of rapturous language, the expert reported that here was no ordinary agrimi kiara —wild billygoat.

Difficulties about Kri-Kri, martyr to the Marshall Plan, began at this point. ECA's gift gesture ran afoul of the United States Agriculture Department.

Only way to get a goat into this country, it appears, is with technicalities—must be a wild goat. So, despite the fact Eftikos had pretty well-tamed Kri-Kri, the goat was officially listed as wild.

Agriculture soothed, Kri-Kri, the wild goat, was to leave Athens by plane July 8, but lacked priority. He is now due to start Saturday, with Eftikos as companion, and arrive in New York Sunday.

Eftikos will be met and honored by a Crete-American society, the Greek Embassy said yesterday.

Not so Kri-Kri. He gets slapped into quarantine—15 days. Only then does he come to Washington, where he will be neither paraded nor mated.

Mental Patient

AccokeekMan Shoots Self Before Kin

"Do you think I'm afraid to pull the trigger?"

With this question to his brother, a 34-year-old Accokeek, Md., man shot himself in the chest, but escaped serious injury early yesterday, Maryland State Police reported.

The injured man, Hewie D. McClenny, was taken to the Perry Point, Md., Veterans Hospital after brief stays at La Plata, Mount Alto and Gallinger Hospitals, police said.

The .22-caliber rifle bullet passed cleanly through his chest and emerged behind his left shoulder, police reported.

State Trooper Allen Coleman said McClenny's brother, Joyce J. McClenny, a Capital Transit Co. employe, told him the following account of the shooting:

Hewie McClenny was sitting in his truck with his wife, Dycie, in Joyce's yard when Joyce returned home about 4 a. m.

After a short conversation, Joyce noticed a .22-caliber rifle beside Hewie on the truck seat. Hewie refused to put it in the back of the truck, asking Joyce if he was afraid.

"I'll show you I'm not afraid," Hewie said, placing the barrel of the rifle against his chest.

"Do you think I'm afraid to pull the trigger?" he asked Joyce. Before the brother could reply, the weapon was discharged.

Hewie McClenny was at one time confined in a mental institution, his brother told police. He was released only after Mrs. McClenny signed custodial papers, he said.

Police found two empty half-pint whisky bottles in the truck and another partially full, they said.

3 New Polio Cases Send D. C. Total to 16

The District Health Department yesterday recorded three new cases of infantile paralysis here, bringing to 16 the total so far this year. Last year's total for the same period was five cases.

The newly-recorded cases include a 7-year-old boy of the 1800 block of New Hampshire ave. nw.; a 22-year-old woman of the 2900 block of Upton st. nw., and a 20-year old woman of the 4700 block of Queens Chapel ter. ne.

The polio-afflicted boy was admitted to Children's Hospital, while the two women have been hospitalized at George Washington University Hospital.

No Violence Marks Found On Kent Body

An autopsy was performed yesterday in the death of Rudolph L. Kent, 49, of 351 Parkland pl. se., who was found unconscious Tuesday in a wooded area near First and Portland sts. se. and died five hours later in Casualty Hospital.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald said that the autopsy showed no marks of violence. He said he would withhold a death certificate pending completion of a chemical analysis.

Kent was discovered by several berry-pickers in an emaciated condition. There has been no explanation for his presence in the woods.

Maryland Man Loses Fight Over Tax Bill

Baltimore, July 12 (AP).—A three-judge Federal Court ruled today an Illinois attorney working for the Government in Washington and living in a Maryland suburb must pay the Maryland State income tax on his salary.

Herman T. Reiling had contested a $208.75 income tax bill from the State for 1944 and 1945.

Judge William C. Coleman wrote the opinion in which the Federal Court agreed with the Maryland Court of Appeals on rulings that Government employes such as Reiling must pay the State income tax.

Reiling had argued that his legal residence remained in Illinois and he voted there. His Maryland home is at 106 East Leland st., Chevy Chase.

Suicide Verdict Issued in Death Of Health Worker

Arthur Eugene Norfolk, 27, doctor's helper at the National Institute of Health in Bethesda, who was found dead Tuesday night in Arlington, was pronounced a suicide yesterday.

The certificate was issued by Arlington Coroner Dr. W. C. Welburn.

Mr. Norfolk was found shot to death about 11:40 p. m. Tuesday beside his parked car in the 2700 block of S. Nash st., Arlington.

The wife, Mrs. Margaret C. Norfolk, 28, lives at 413 E. Belfonte ave., Alexandria, with her 3-year-old son. A landlady at that address said Mrs. Norfolk had been there since last November, when she separated from her husband.

Court Halts Gas Station Ordinance

Alexandria Judge Voids Restraint on Self Service Units; Hearing Planned

An Alexandria ordinance, outlawing self-service gas stations in the city, was voided temporarily yesterday by a restraining order issued in the city's Circuit Court.

The temporary order, signed by Judge Paul E. Brown, was issued in favor of W. C. Wills, whose self-service station on Jefferson Davis hwy. has been in operation since before the City Council began preparation of the ordinance approved Tuesday night.

The restraining order was in response to a request for an injunction sought by Wills to prevent the city from enforcing the new ordinance. It will remain in force until the case is finally determined in the Circuit Court.

Plans Were Known, He Says

In his petition for the injunction, Wills asserted he opened the gas station six weeks ago with the unanimous approval of the council, which had "full knowledge of the type of operation to be undertaken."

He contended that he offered to assist the council with the "benefit of his experience" in preparing adequate safety regulations for his and similar stations which might be established.

His petition said the prohibitive ordinance was passed by the council despite the fact that a committee of three, which had been delegated to draw up safety regulations for gas stations, made no recommendations for prohibiting self-service establishments. The committee membership includes the chief of the city's fire prevention bureau, John Posey, who told the council Wills' station was "safer than many conventional gas stations."

Wills also charged that council members who voted for the ordinance were "not motivated in passing the ordinance on grounds of public safety but purely for the economic protection of existing retailers."

Councilmen Own Stations

Two members of the council, he noted in his petition, are owners of conventional gas stations, while a third is a law partner of one of the station operators. Although he did not name them, he referred to Councilmen James M. Duncan, jr., and Roy Bragg, both of whom own gas stations, and Leroy S. Bendheim, who is Bragg's law partner.

Duncan declined to vote on the ordinance because of his status as a gas station owner, but both Bragg and Bendheim voted to prohibit self-service stations.

Willis said he had expended over $40,000 on the property since the council gave him a permit to build it last February 25. He contended he will suffer "irreparable harm" unless the city is enjoined from enforcing the measure.

No date has been set for a hearing on the injunction.

Hearing Set On License for Atlas Club

A hearing was set yesterday for July 19 by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board on the Atlas Club's application for a Class C private club license.

The Atlas, located at 1348 E st. nw., is one of 11 Washington after-hours clubs whose charters were attacked last March by United States Attorney George Morris Fay.

Court action proceeded against some of the clubs but the Atlas case was withdrawn in May on the stipulation that the club apply "immediately" for an ABC license.

The license application lists as officers of the Atlas Club: Sidney Brown, president; Roy Edward Miles, vice president, and Ralph C. Kilpatrick, secretary-treasurer.

The name of Garrett F. Quinn, who identified himself as president and general manager of the Atlas Club when he testified before the House District crime inquiry last February, is not listed on the application.

Reached by telephone, Quinn said, "I no longer have an interest in the club. I'm not even a member."

He declined to say how he had disposed of his interest in the club.

Applicants granted a Class C club license pay the District an annual fee of $425, as compared with an $825 fee paid by restaurants serving the general public.

Under ABC regulations, holders of a Class C club license must observe the same closing hours as restaurants, and must see that members and their guests do not drink standing up or drink whisky from their own bottles.

Woman Hurt As Rammed Car Hits Her

Motorist Accused Of Hitting Auto Hurled 87 Feet

A District woman was injured last night in an accident involving two cars on Military hwy., just east of Branch ave., in Prince Georges County.

Miss Lucille Weeks, 23, of 1209 Clifton st. nw., suffered head and body injuries when struck by a parked car which was rammed by another automobile. She was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Police charged Andrew Powahick, an enlisted man at Andrews Field, with driving recklessly while drunk. Police said his car hit a second car, in front of which Miss Weeks was standing, with such force it ran 87 feet after Miss Weeks was struck.

District Policeman Hurt

A 28-year-old District policeman suffered a broken leg early yesterday when he was struck by an automobile as he was attempting to check a burned-out street light.

In Emergency Hospital is Pvt. Irving A. Tennyson, of Glen Mar Park, Md. Besides the fractured leg, he suffered abrasions to the shoulder and possible internal injuries.

Tennyson, attached to the Seventh Precinct, was patrolling the 4600 block of Canal rd. when he got out of his scout car to take down the number of the defective light.

Released on Bond

He was struck by a car operated by Herbert C. Broyhill, 29, of 4901 Old Dominion dr., Arlington, the police report said.

Broyhill has been charged with having an expired permit and failing to give full time and attention to driving. He has been released on $600 bond for court action.

Mrs. Myra C. Peckover, 54, of 507 S. Wakefield st., Arlington, an officer at the Lorton Reformatory, received a fractured knee and nose when her new car went out of control on Columbia pike at Baileys Crossroads yesterday at about 6 p. m.

Passengers in the car at the time of the accident were Mrs. Peckover's daughter, Mrs. Anna Schroder, 24, of the Wakefield st. address, and her granddaughter, Donna, 4. Mrs. Schroeder was treated at Arlington Hospital for an injured knee. Donna was not injured. Mrs. Peckover was admitted to the hospital.

Victims Under Treatment

A 29-year-old Embassy Dairy route man and his brother were injured yesterday when their truck went out of control and crashed into an embankment on Massachusetts ave. at Springfield dr., Bethesda.

The driver, Herbert F. Graf, of 2234 Savannah ter. se., was admitted to Suburban Hospital with multiple lacerations and possible internal injuries. His brother, Richard J. Graf, 24, of 1915 19th pl. se., who was riding as a helper, was treated for lacerations of the head.

D. C. Woman Seeks Second Divorce From Husband

Mrs. Jean Parker Casper, 33, 4801 Connecticut ave., sued her 35-year-old husband for divorce for the second time within four years in District Court yesterday.

In her suit, she stated she had been married in June, 1940, to Daniel A. Casper, a Bureau of Internal Revenue attorney.

They were divorced in August, 1946, the suit said.

The Caspers were remarried January 11, 1947, according to the suit.

The divorce petition filed yesterday charges that Mrs. Casper was deserted 16 months after the remarriage.

Sets County Pace

Cheverly Triples Its Population

Cheverly, with a population gain of 211 percent, led the list of 11 incorporated towns in Prince Georges County, the Census Bureau reported yesterday.

Its population 10 years ago was 996, and is now 3100. Next to Rockville, which increased 239 percent, Cheverly grew faster than any other locality in Greater Washington.

Greenbelt also bloomed, from 2831 to 7048.

The aggregate increase of the 11 towns was 118 percent, as compared with the county's 117 percent.

The figures were broken down from the county census, conducted under the direction of Dudley Briscoe, Annapolis census area supervisor.

The tabulation, published here for the first time, is as follows:

Town	1950	1940
Bladensburg	2891	1220
Brentwood	3500	2433
Cheverly	3100	996
College Park (Not incorp. in 1940).	11,137	....
Greenbelt	7048	2831
Hyattsville	12,288	6575
Laurel	4469	2823
Mt. Rainier	10,978	4830
Riverdale	5501	2330
Seat Pleasant	2241	1553
Takoma Park (Incl. sect. of town in Mont. Co.)	13,301	8938

Populations still being figured include Capitol Heights, Colmar Manor, Cottage City and Fairmont Heights.

In Montgomery County, Silver Spring, though unincorporated, will receive a special enumeration which will be announced later, the Census Bureau said.

Previously announced 1950 figures for towns in Montgomery County and in Fairfax County, Va., were as follows:

Montgomery: Rockville, 6948 (revised from original figure of 6940); Gaithersburg, 2159; Chevy Chase in Maryland, 1963, and Kensington, 1606.

Fairfax: Vienna, 2020; Fairfax town, 1945, and Herndon, 1471.

The population figure for Falls Church, previously announced as 7529, has been revised to 7534.

A. B. & W. bus drivers on some runs to Fairlington have to be guided on the correct route by "several women passengers" who "fortunately" are usually on hand, a witness said yesterday at an Interstate Commerce Committee hearing.

The witness, Thomas F. Proctor, is chairman of the public utilities committee of the Fairlington Civic Associaton.

He opposed a general fare increase of 5 cents for interstate rides between Washington and nearby Virginia points requested by the bus line, the subject of the ICC hearing.

Proctor, who commutes via A.B.&W. between his home in Fairlington and his job as transportation analyst in the office of the solicitor, United States Postoffice Department, concentrated most of his fire on the line's Fairlington service.

"Utter Confusion and Chaos"

He said there is often "utter confusion and chaos" at the Fairlington express bus loading platform at 12th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., so that the driver often "does not know what route he is supposed to follow or whether he is supposed to go through Parkfairfax."

Proctor asserted that some drivers on express runs to Fairlington, not scheduled to go through Parkfairfax, pick up passengers in Shirlington who persuade the driver to go through Parkfairfax. This leaves the Fairlington passengers in a state of "inconvenience and annoyance," Proctor said.

Luckily, when the right women passengers are aboard, he added, they "have been very successful" in persuading the drivers that they are not supposed to go through Parkfairfax, and "ably assist" them in piloting the buses.

Patrons Take "Dim View"

Fairlington's sister apartment community figured further in Proctor's testimony as he told ICC Examiner H. C. Lawton that "Fairlington residents take a dim view of A. B. & W.'s policy of supplying Parkfairfax service at the expense and inconvenience of Fairlington." The Fairlington fare is 15 cents cash, while Parkfairfax riders can buy 12½-cent tokens.

Generally, Proctor said lower, not higher fares, are the answer to A. B. & W.'s problem—if there is a problem, he added. Improved

Cross-examined by S. Harrison Kahn, company counsel, Proctor conceded that the company is giving more valuable service by having rush-hour expresses for Fairlington at the same fare as the slower "basic" service.

The hearing was adjourned yesterday until 9:30 a. m. today, when other witnesses opposed to the fare increases are expected to testify.

Milk 'Racket' Accusation Infuriates Rep. Smith

Hot Words Flung As Westerners Light Into '85% Monopoly' Here

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Dairy State Congressmen, who a few weeks ago were fighting together against oleomargarine, turned to rowing among themselves yesterday over the Washington milk market.

One fighting word, used by Wisconsin's Representative Reid F. Murray (R.) stirred Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) to a display of anger such as seldom is seen between fellow Federal legislators.

Murray called the District Health laws, that virtually limit the Washington milkshed to the area of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, a "racket."

"Against All Rackets"

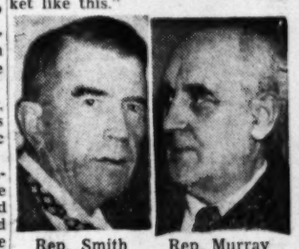
Murray had just finished an attack upon the District regulations, pleading for his bill that would allow milk from "any of the 45 States," approved by the Public Health Service, to come into the Washington market. Smith leaned forward, and demanded:

"Let's be frank. You're in favor of destroying the Washington milk market."

"I'm against all rackets," Murray shouted back, angrily. "I don't care if it's yours or whose it is."

"Are you charging Maryland and Virginia farmers with conducting a racket?" Smith asked.

"They're pretty close to the edge of it," came back Murray. "I'm not in favor of any group of farmers putting themselves in the position of controlling a big market like this."



Rep. Smith Rep. Murray

What had been a private fight between Smith and Murray then spread. Representative Arthur L. Miller (R., Nebr.), who has also offered a measure to open the local market to outsiders, similar to Murray's bill, broke in with:

"When one group controls 85 percent of a market like Washington it comes pretty close to a racket."

"Do you regard a farmers' cooperative, organized with help from the Department of Agriculture, even if it controls all the market—do you regard that as a racket?" Smith asked Miller.

Smith Shouts at Miller

"Let's let the public decide," shouted Miller, above the uproar.

Nobody could hear Smith's first angry reply. Several members of both the committee and the audience tried to talk at once. Chairman Thomas G. Abernethy of the District subcommittee holding the hearing added to the noise trying to gavel order. Finally, above the din, Smith shouted at Miller: "You're putting it in the minds of the public that it is a racket."

Before Abernethy could restore order, part of the audience got into the show. Among them was John F. Hillyard, attorney for the Wakefield Dairy, one of several milk distributors fighting the present regulations. Hillyard, who had reached a spot alongside Murray, shouted: "It is a racket! We have witnesses, who will prove it is a racket!"

Finally Abernethy demanded of both Smith and Miller: "Let's get back to Mr. Murray."

Smith Battles Racket Charge

hearings conducted by the District Commissioners Monday and Tuesday, members of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Association were in the majority.

One worried visitor represented a national milk producers association. Dairymen from both Wisconsin and the local milk area are among his membership. "We were afraid of this," he told The Washington Post, "when the margarine law was passed."

Murray ridiculed the local milk regulations in his plea for a "common-sense law." He pointed out:

1. That ice cream may be sold here that is made from cream that is turned down by the District inspectors. It can't be sold as cream, but it may be sold as ice-cream.

2. That Washington doesn't permit the sale of dried skim milk, or dried whole milk although the Department of Agriculture has bought about 100 million dollars worth to support milk prices. The same milk is being fed to millions of school children every day in the school lunch program.

Murray then pointed out that butter from farms not inspected by District health officers, and margarine made from skimmed milk from farms outside the District inspection area are sold here. He boasted that, as Congressman from Wisconsin's Seventh District, he "represents one percent of all the dairy cows in the United States."

Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.) supported Smith. He joined in asking Murray to define grade A milk. When Murray answered: "Grade A milk is, well, its grade A milk. We don't produce any other kind in Wisconsin," Miller broke in. He read a page from the Public Health Milk Code defining Grade A. "There are several more pages. I'll read them all if you want," he said. Nobody insisted.

Cattleman Backs Cooperative

Surprise support for the present setup came from Representative Walter K. Granger (D.), a Utah beef-cattle raiser. Granger reminded Murray of the organization of milk cooperatives near city markets in the depression days of the 1930's.

"Let's not tear down a structure it took 50 years to build," he pleaded. "You've spent a lot of time, and have voted to help build up these cooperative groups," he reminded Murray. "We built them to protect both the health of the consumers and the economic health of the farmers."

Granger also questioned a remark by Murray comparing the inspection of milk with the inspection of meat. "We don't send District inspectors to Chicago to inspect all the meat we get," Murray said. Granger said: "I hope you're not going to contend that the inspection of meat is in the same category as the inspection of milk."

District Commissioner J. Russell Young told the group that the Commissioners haven't decided about relaxing the inspection code. "We are interested in only one thing," he said. "That is an adequate supply of the purest milk possible for the people of Washington."

The Commissioner took a lot of heat out of the atmosphere when he remarked jokingly: "Milk, there must be a lot of people who drink it. Me, I never touch the stuff." The room burst into laughter.

The meeting adjourned until 10 a. m. today with Health Commissioner Seckinger pleading for continued authority to inspect all farms furnishing milk to Washington. He will resume his testimony this morning.

At the same time, officials of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association will be questioned by the Gillette subcommittee of the Senate Agriculture Committee. Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) chairman, is investigating high food prices in Washington and elsewhere.

Fashion Favors Glamor

NETTIE ROSENSTEIN makes glamour out of satin and net

ADELE SIMPSON: glamour suit

HERBERT SONDHEIM makes glamour out of sequins and braid

By Peggy Preston

NEW YORK, July 12.—Carmen must have clicked her castanets in a most designing manner this year. For the high-handed heroine and the Spain she represents, have left a marked impression on fall fashions.

There's a decided Spanish influence running through everything from hats to handbags and shoes. Its most dramatic impact is felt in the evening wear groups, where the grandee manner is at its best. So bold is the feeling here, that one almost expects a model to come whirling down the runway with a rose in her teeth—and a dagger in her hand.

It would seem that the designers, having tired of the subdued, slim lines of their daytime collections, have concentrated the full force of their love for drama in evening glamour clothes. That goes for all the top-notchers whose clothes we've seen thus far, including Ben Reig, Maurice Rentner, Nettie Rosenstein, Herbert Sondheim, Elizabeth Arden and the rest.

FIRST you note the Spanish drama in the colors. Foremost is the abundance of dull, deep, dark black (whatever happened to our beloved Navy?); and then the blazing Castilian reds, Goya yellow, soft Velasquez blues and greens. It's there in the breath-taking infanta-inspired ball gowns, with their great, trailing skirts, lace mantillas and ball-fringed velvets.

Some of the gowns are like portrait pieces, actually. One of the most beautiful scenes we've seen all week was the finale of the Nettie Rosenstein showing at Sherry's, staged with all the pomp and splendor of an opening night at the opera.

Ten regal gowns, each more enticing than the other, were shown simultaneously. There was an infanta dress of cathedral red satin, the hugh skirt and tiny bodice draped in black lace. Slipper satins and satin brocades glistened like jewels in tones of violet, pink, tangerine, poppy and turquoise. Then, too, there was a crimson velvet, a gold lace and lame, the colors of which would inspire an artist.

HERBERT SONDHEIM paced his collection with some magnificent dinner and evening gowns. A special breath-taker, a mauve taffeta and tulle. Another, a lounge costume with gold lame torreador pants and overcoat of velvet in the same antique gold shade.

Nice touch in the Sondheim group was his pair of Scotch plaid costumes—the plaid of Princess Margaret Rose. Included were yarn-dyed silk taffeta dance frocks, with wide, swinging coats of matching wool plaid.

Little Adele Simpson made a hit with her "wave length" evening skirts, swirling pieces that dip to the ankle in back, rise in front, and ripple daintly all around. "I'm tired of hearing women say they don't like short evening dresses," she explains. "Here's my answer." And a nice one it is, too.

She, too, has caught the spirit of Spain. In such a skirt, she has used brocade woven to look like black lace, sprinkled it with jet, and lined it with Madrid lace. A black satin, with strapless bodice, has a cuff of the same, dashing crimson.

Short Hair Best in Summer

I've had so many letters asking me what is going to happen to short hair that I think perhaps we should talk about it a little.

As a whole, hair is still short, and certainly it's best to leave it that way for the summer. However the trend will be toward a little longer hair this fall—not really long—but long enough to take the soft pretty waves that are coming back into fashion after the short straight hair of the 1949-50 winter.

Envoy's Wife Packs for Jaunt

By Marie McNair

BETWEEN now and when they sail August 25 for Sweden, Ambassador and Mrs. Walton Butterworth will be at their farm, the Valley House, Brookeville, Md.

The Butterworths have sold their house on LeRoy pl. to Comdr. and Mrs. W. H. Fitzgerald and they'll lease the farm for the duration of Mr. Butterworth's duty in Stockholm.

Meanwhile Mrs. Butterworth is spending these few days before moving to the country, in a maze of packing and shipping crates. She'll take her rugs, pictures and the like with her to Sweden, put the remainder of her furnishings in storage.

Just as our Ambassador prepares to take off for his new post, Sweden's envoy comes hurrying back to Washington. Erik Boheman, who left several weeks ago for his homeland to spend the summer, returned several days ago, as a result of Korean fighting. Mme. Boheman and the children, however, have remained in Sweden for a longer stay.

Mr. Butterworth came back from China just two years ago after serving as Minister at our embassy in Nanking. Appointed Director of the Office of the Far Eastern division of the State Department, his title was shifted with the department's reorganization to that of Assistant Secretary of State in charge of Far Eastern Affairs.

Veep and His Mrs. Have an Anniversary

VICE PRESIDENT and Mrs. Alben Barkley are the guests in whose honor Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz will entertain at dinner Friday evening. The romance of the Veep and then Mrs. Hadley was in early flower at a party given in honor of the Vice President by Mr. and Mrs. Cafritz almost a year ago. So—the dinner Friday evening is by way of an anniversary fete.

British Minister J. W. Taylor has been named British Ambassador to Mexico. He will be succeeded at his post here by Charles Empson, whose most recent post has been Minister at Rome. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have been in Washington since September, 1948, are now in Britain on leave before Mr. Taylor takes up his new post. Mr. Empson will take up his duties here before the end of the year, but the exact date has not yet been fixed.

With his duties as Agricultural Attache of the British Embassy concluded, A. N. Duckham, C. B. E. with Mrs. Duckham and their children will sail July 19 for home. Mr. Duckham, who served five years in Washington, has been named Assistant Secretary of the Ministry of Agriculture in charge of the General Division.

R. G. Baskett, professor of agricultural chemistry at Queen's University, Belfast, will be Mr. Duckham's successor. He was also chief scientific adviser to the Ministry of Agriculture for North Ireland. He's here now to confer with Mr. Duckham and when he returns in September he'll be accompanied by Mrs. Baskett and their two sons. An older son will remain in school in Britain.

Congratulations are being received by Mr. and Mrs. Donn Braden Spenser on the birth of a son, their first child, on Tuesday at George Washington Hospital.

The baby is the great-grandson of Joseph C. Grew, former United States Ambassador to Japan, and Mrs. Grew. Mrs. Spenser is the former Miss Edith Moffat, daughter of the late J. Pierrepont Moffat, United States Ambassador to Canada, and Mrs. Moffat of Washington.

Fall activities of the group will be discussed.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Cohn announce the birth of their second son, Harold Alvin Cohn, on June 17. Mrs. Cohn is the former Miss Charlotte A. Wiener.

East Does Meet West Nowadays

EAST DOES meet West in Washington society and the number of colorful saris worn to Capital parties proves it.

This week at the party given by Director Camille Gutt of the International Monetary Fund for the finance minister of Pakistan, Ghulam Mohammad, saris and related costumes almost outnumbered the typical American evening dress in the Carlton Hotel's Carlton Room.

Mme. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit, India's dynamic ambassador, led off the list of gracefully garbed Oriental women.

Pakistan women call their national dress the gharara, although to Western eyes it resembles the sari. In the Pakistan group at this international party were Mrs. K. F. Khalil, with her husband who is first secretary at the Embassy of Pakistan, and Mrs. N. A. K. Raza, accompanied by Brigadier Raza, military and air attache for Pakistan. She was photographed in conversation with Frank Coe, executive secretary of the Fund.

Other wearers of diaphonous stoles, circulating through the crowd gathered to welcome Pakistan into the Fund, demonstrated again that Washington society is international.

All Done With the Aid of Mirrors, Says Anne, Instructing a Reader How to 'Lower' High Ceilings

DEAR ANNE:
I have recently purchased an old house, and the following questions trouble me:

The ceilings are high, approximately 9 feet, 6 inches and there is a white molding matching the woodwork around the top of the wall. It is pleasing in appearance, but are moldings still favored? How high should a chair rail be in a dining room with the same high ceiling? What treatment of windows has the effect of "towering" the ceiling? A. M., Washington.

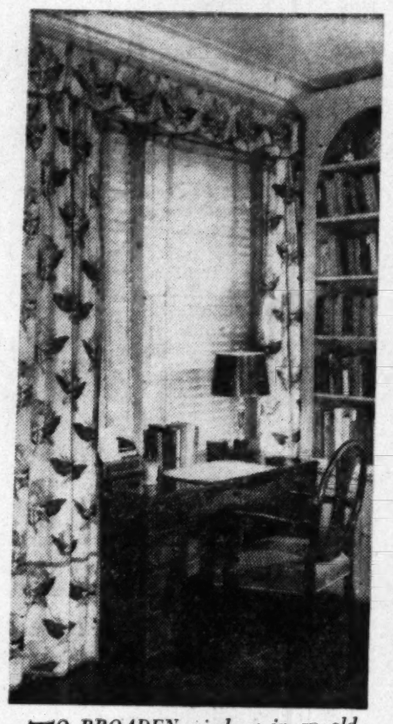
Here's what decorator Helen Koues has to say about moldings in her "American Woman's Encyclopedia of Home Decorating" (Garden City Publishing Co., 1948):

"Moldings and heavy ornamental panelings are things of the past in general decoration except in some simple types of knotty-pine Colonial rooms and strictly period rooms."

Not all decorators consign moldings quite so definitely to the past, however. Some point out that, though pictures no longer hang by long wires and hooks from the ceiling, moldings still serve a useful purpose as a ceiling line finish where there is no cornice. High ceilings can also be "dropped" by placing the molding 3 to 18 inches below it and continuing the ceiling finish down to the molding.

If yours is a charming old house and you plan to decorate in the spirit of the time in which it was built, by all means leave the molding. On the other hand, if you wish to remodel and decorate in the modern manner, the molding might well be removed.

As to the chair rail, it should be chair-high regardless of the height of the ceiling. The original idea of chair rails was to form a buffer between the chair back and the wall finish. Make it so that the top of the back of your dining chairs will rest against it.



TO BROADEN windows in an old house, use a valance and hang draperies over the wall at either side of window

If you have the tall, narrow windows found in many old homes, you can lower the ceiling by "widening" them. Do this by hanging the draperies over the wall at each side of the window, with a fairly deep valance across the top.

If there are two tall windows at the end of a room, separated only by a narrow wall space, you might do this: Cover the wall between the windows with a mirror. Hang the draperies at either side of the two windows over the wall. A shaped valance board running the full width of the room will increase the effect of a wall that is all window.

DEAR ANNE:
What is the safest way to separate two glass tumblers that are stuck together?
W. G., Washington.

Fill the inside one with cold water and set the outer one in warm water. The resulting contraction and expansion will separate them almost at once.

DEAR ANNE:
Where on Wisconsin ave. is an electric exchange store located—or anywhere in the northwest section?
Constant Reader.

There's a shop at 1620 Wisconsin ave. nw., that sells second-hand electric appliances on commission. However, I do not know of a place that makes a custom of exchanging them.

Child Welfare

Chief Scans Year's Trend

The year 1950 is a significant point in the history of child and youth welfare in the United States and in the world, Miss Katharine F. Lenroot said yesterday.

The Chief of the Children's Bureau, Federal Security Agency, was guest speaker at the 41st annual meeting of the American Home Economics Association now meeting in Boston, Mass.

Four trends are clearly evident in the history of child and youth welfare in our Nation, she said.

"One of these is toward interprofessional effort in research, in training of personnel, and in services." The Children's Bureau, she continued, was established upon the principle of the correlation of various specialties in behalf of the whole child. "As the first half of the Twentieth Century was notable for specialization, the last half will be a period of integration," she explained.

The second trend, Miss Lenroot said, is toward increased acceptance of responsibility for community conditions and community services by individual citizens. This can be easily seen, she pointed out, in the almost spontaneously-formed organizations of mothers of pre-school children for nursery school and pre-school group play purposes.

A third trend, she continued, is toward the sharing of knowledge and skills and of financial support on the part of local communities, the States, and the Federal Government. This is evidenced, Miss Lenroot said, by the extension of grants-in-aid for health and welfare services, the financial aid being accompanied by means for sharing ideas and experience throughout the Nation.

A fourth trend is toward recognizing the importance of cooperation and mutual respect among different cultural groups, with emphasis on the equal dignity and worth of the human personality in all cultural groups, and on international cooperation in behalf of children, she concluded.

Good Posture Is a Wrinkle Cure

By Ida Jean Kain

"Please do a column on wrinkles," writes a reader in requesting a reducing diet.

Now let's read between the lines, and speculate as to what age this reader might be. Possibly she is around 38 and just beginning to notice faint signs of wrinkles here and there. That is the best time to start; for if there is one place where prevention is better than cure, it's with wrinkles.

Since frowning and inner tension can make wrinkles faster than age, that is where to start the preventive measures. Faces are composed of muscles, and a line is nothing more than a fold under the skin, caused by constant contraction. Our habitual expressions bring certain muscles into use, over and over. Frowning works about 45 facial muscles tensely, and the pull is down . . . so it's small wonder constant frowning etches in lines.

Smiling brings into play about 13 muscles, but not tensely, and the smile lines are up and give the face a lift. Then too, our thoughts have a more important beauty rôle than is generally realized. Face muscles seem to obey dominant thought patterns, follow those lines and form our expressions.

Hurry is a bad habit, particularly hurrying with the face. Hurry builds up tension, and tension definitely makes wrinkles. Moral: Learn to relax . . . and break the hurry habit. Calm, imperturbable women always have fewer lines.

Creams, muscle oils and lubricants are a great help. As we get along, the skin loses some of its natural oil, and this can be counteracted with preparations which lubricate the skin. Women today look a good 10 years younger at every age than women did years ago, due to improved medical care, the science of nutrition and the use of beauty aids.

But now let's say the writer of this letter is like some of the rest of us and past 40, perhaps going for 50, and wrinkles seem to be an established fact . . . it's a little late for prevention. Then what measures should be taken? Well, a philosophical attitude is a great help . . . and relaxing works wonders with faces at all stages. And the faithful and regular use of creams is rewarding. Cream should be massaged upward with the muscle structure, and care taken not to pull the skin. Beauticians have brought out skin stimulants which wake up the skin and perk up the circulation.

There is one wrinkle chaser every woman can afford, and that's good posture with beautiful head carriage. Hold your head squarely on your shoulders, chin level, and pull up with that line at the back of the neck. This counteracts gravity, and wrinkles get far less of a head start.

P.S. The reader who requested this column had not yet lost weight, so don't jump to that conclusion. A good reducing diet is a beauty tonic.

Is Erwin Trying To Be the Rabbit?

By Richard L. Coe

IN THE OLNEY THEATER'S "Harvey," Stuart Erwin seems to be trying to play the invisible white rabbit instead of Elwood P. Dowd.

At least, never having seen Mary Chase's invisible rabbit, I assume that is what Actor Erwin is trying to give us, for he certainly is not offering us the wry Elwood.

Elwood, you must remember, is the happy soul who presents his furry friend to unhappy souls. In the course of his remarkable adventures, Mr. Dowd is called upon to utter many a pithy sentence about mankind. Each is brief, pointed and shrewd, but the beauty of them is in the fact that Mr. Dowd has undoubtedly thought them up himself, takes them seriously and believes them wholeheartedly.

This vital fact seems to have escaped both Director Harry Ellerbe and Actor Erwin. It would appear that as a Hollwood resident, Erwin has heard that Dowd is a Buffola part, a whiz, that his sayings have rocked people off their seats since 1944 and that now, by golly, it's Erwin's turn to bat out the yucks.

So, Erwin's Elwood is a Jack Carson sort of gloom-chaser, hearty and a card, a conventioneer without his fez, a comic conscious of his cracks. This is not, nor ever was, the Elwood who, asked casually if there was anything one could do for him answered: "Why, what did you have in mind?" And when Elwood tells you that Harvey has done away with time and space and is better than Einstein, for he does away with time and space—and objections, he throws it at you.

The beauty of the real Dowd approach is his sincere understatement. What he says is perfectly sensible to him. Erwin makes Dowd all too conscious that what he is saying is funny. There is all the difference in the world.

The result is that the Olney's "Harvey," while it probably will please those who've never been exposed to this classic of modern comedies before, is not the play so brilliantly directed by the late Antoinette Perry and so delicately revealed by Frank Fay. This is late in the century to wave the banner for Fay's Dowd again, but watching the comedy once more at Olney, one couldn't help imagining that its chances might have been slim without the original star's clever underplaying. I saw Fay do it twice (never saw anyone else) and both times he was able to make you forget the mechanics of construction.

She's too Nice!

Another aspect of the Olney "Harvey" is the casting of Sallie Brophy as Dowd's gawky, ill-natured niece. Since Miss Brophy is both pretty and charming, this loses all the humor directed at her.

Dora Clement, who played the distressed sister with Fay toward the end of the run, repeats her role here with telling effect, though it is not her fault that she lacks the startling architecture of the part's inimitable creator, Josephine Hull.

While I don't intend to say that a summer theater offering should be on a par with the Fay original or that there are not many laughs in Olney's tenant, I do wish Erwin could forget he's in one of our time's better comedies.

"HARVEY." Richard Skinner and Evelyn Freyman present the Pulitzer Prize comedy in three acts by Mary Chase. Settings by S. Syrjala. Directed by Harry Ellerbe. Through Sunday evening; matinees Saturday and Sunday. At the Olney Country Theater.

Missing D. C. Man Found Dead In Fairfax Tourist Cabin

Solvin W. Gordon, 66, of 3700 Massachusetts ave. nw., was found dead in a Fairfax County tourist cabin yesterday, a few hours after his family had reported his absence to the missing persons bureau here.

Gordon, retired Washington real estate man and merchant, was known unofficially as the "Mayor of the Southwest" both for his initials and because of his extensive land and business holdings in that area.

His body was found in a cabin near Pat and Mike's Restaurant, about 9 miles south of Alexandria on Route 1. Dr. Emmanuel Newman, Fairfax medical examiner, said he died of natural causes.

Fairfax County Police Capt. James Mahoney said he had received a call about 1 p. m. from the proprietor of the tourist court that a maid had discovered the body. Mahoney said he was told Gordon had checked into the cabin at about 5 p. m. Tuesday.

The dead man was identified shortly after county police learned he was sought by the missing persons bureau, according to Mahoney.

District police said Gordon's absence yesterday morning was reported by his son, Dr. Leon S. Gordon, physician to the District Boxing Commission, who also lives at the Massachusetts ave. address. Dr. Gordon said his father had failed to return to his home after leaving in his automobile about midafternoon Tuesday.

A native of Russia, Gordon came to this country at the age of 6, settling in Baltimore. Just prior to World War I, he was the middleweight boxing champ of the United States Navy.

He came to Washington 45 years ago, and owned three grocery stores in the southwest. He retired 12 years ago because of heart trouble.

Gordon was a member of Osiris Lodge, FAAM.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs Freda W.; and three physician sons, Dr. Leon S., Dr. Everett J. and Dr. Davis S. Gordon, all of 3700 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 11 a. m. at Danzanski's Funeral home, 3501 14th st. nw. Burial will be in B'nai Israel cemetery, Oxon Hill, Md.

New Route Asked for D-4 Buses

The District Public Utilities Commission was asked yesterday to reroute the Capital Transit Co. D-4 bus line through the intersection of MacArthur blvd. and Foxhall rd. nw.

Since 1943 the line has been routed over Q st. between the two diagonal streets about a quarter mile from their intersection. This cut off a triangle which had been formerly served by the line. Some 600 residents in the area petitioned the PUC to reroute the line back along the two long legs of the triangle to provide more adequate service.

Representatives of the Palisades Citizens Association said that buses on Q st. present a safety hazard to children at the Hardy School there. They also said that Q st. is in a poor state of repair and that bus traffic makes it worse. Vibration from buses was blamed for cracks appearing in the walls of one house.

The PUC's coordinating committee of highway, police and traffic officials recommended against the change because of the hairpin turn from MacArthur blvd. into Foxhall rd.

CTC Engineer Dean J. Locke said the company also opposed the rerouting because of the turn, an added $14,500 annual cost to the company and the fact that no patrons who would benefit from the change now live more than a quarter mile from existing stops. The PUC took the request under advisement.

3000 Voices Charm With Indiana Lays

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

He's a Hoosier, he's a Hoosier,
I guess that makes him all right.

—James Whitcomb Riley

There was no guessing about it last night as 3000 sweet-voiced Hoosier women combined their talents to give Washington the nicest birthday party of its sesquicentennial year.

The massed semicircle of singers, all in white-collared gowns, and all comfortably seated, sang the "Hoosier Heritage," a group of poems by James Whitcomb Riley, set to music.

The Hoosier poet's lyrics could be heard for blocks beyond the confines of the Senate fountain plaza, magnified and deepened by a giant amplifying system spaced around the sesquicentennial band shell.

Audience of Thousands

The audience filled the thousands of chairs a halfhour before show time, and it was standing room only as the singing began.

Threatening skies thinned and lifted, as if by command of the Sesquicentennial Commission, and streaks of sunlight broke through just before the day died.

In the background, the Capitol dome, target of a battery of floodlights, gleamed snow-white against the evening sky.

And Hoosiers, who the day before were hot under the collar because of the seeming lack of preparation, were proud and delighted.

Everybody's Happy

"It all turned out fine," said Senator Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.).

"We are delighted with the setup," beamed Albert P. Stewart, director of the Purdue University Glee Club, and conductor of last night's performers.

Stewart was doubly proud as his touring glee club had just returned from a triumphant tour of Europe and was sitting under his podium.

"We're just bubbling over with pride," said Indiana Gov. Henry F. Schricker.

Governor Schricker went on a boat ride with some of the ladies yesterday. On the boat they presented him with a big hat box. The Governor thought it was going to be a new white hat. He's known as "the man with the white hat."

Turned out to be a package of fresh chewing tobacco. "That's my weakness," smiled the Governor.

Near the end of the singing, Carter T. Barron, executive vice chairman of the Sesquicentennial Commission, presented Governor Schricker with a scroll which read:

"The National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission on the occasion of the 150th anniversary of the establishment of the permanent seat of the Federal Government in Washington, D. C., presents this expression of appreciation and good will to the people of the great State of Indiana in recognition of their adherence to the traditional American ideals of freedom which have inspired our Nation's unity and progress."

The scroll will hang in the State House at Indianapolis as a memento of Indiana Honor Day in Washington.

Vote on Fairfax Manager Plan May Be Nov. 7

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

Advocates of a changeover to the county merger form of government in Fairfax County agreed yesterday that November 7 is the most likely date for an impending vote on their approval.

Failure of the Circuit Court to act thus far on a petition filed May 6, asking the referendum, leaves only a period of four weeks during which the court can get the referendum at any date other than the fall general election, they pointed out.

It is mandatory that the court call a referendum on a proposed governmental change if it is formally requested by 10 percent of the qualified voters. It is within the court's discretion, however, to call the special election not less than 60 days nor more than 90 days after the formal order is issued, or to set it at the next general election.

The law further specifies that no special election can be called within 30 days of a general election. Thus, the referendum could not be ordered after October 8, should the court elect to choose a date other than the general election, set for November 7.

In view of these facts, sponsors of the change point out, Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown would have to act before August 9 to comply with the requirement that he call the election "no less than 60 days" from the date of his order.

Since he has taken no action thus far, it is the prevailing belief that he will select the November date.

Judge Brown himself declined to indicate yesterday when he planned to call the election. His only observation was that "the voters will know 60 days ahead of time."

Meanwhile, a 21-member commission appointed by the county's board of supervisors to study the advisability of changing the form of government will enter the second stage of its study next week.

The commission has held six public hearings. It plans a series of conferences between its executive committee and local civic organizations to get their views on the proposed change. A schedule of meetings has not yet been completed.

Board Rejects Offer to Build Fairfax School

A proposal by developers of apartments in the Willston area of Fairfax County to build an elementary school for the county has been rejected by the county school board.

Members of the board yesterday agreed to halt further consideration of the plan because they could not reach agreement with the developers on a financial settlement to transfer the property to the county.

The builders, Standard Construction Co. and King's Kitchen, Inc., had offered to erect the school and rent it to the county for $20,000 a year until the initial cost had been written off. However, School Supt. W. T. Woodson said the board would not agree to the proposed rental and had been unable to reach agreement on a "final" price for the property.

Another reason for abandoning the plan, Woodson said, is that it is now too late to start construction of the school in time for the new term in September. He said the board would ask the developers to rent temporary space in their apartment buildings to the county for use as classrooms until a new school can be built in the area.

The Oak Street School Parent-Teachers Association last night criticized the rejection, declaring that county school authorities urged support for the school bond issue as a means of assuring the construction of the Willston School.

"We dislike imputing bad faith to anyone, but we cannot but wonder if the Willston School was only a campaign promise," W. R. Curtis, association president, declared.

Failure to erect the school will force further overcrowding of the "already overcrowded Oak Street School," he said.

At yesterday's meeting, the board voted to award a contract for construction of an eight-classroom addition to the Annandale School to the firm of E. E. Simpson and Brother of Alexandria. The firm was the lowest of four bidders, with a bid of $213,000.

District Man, 3 Others Cleared Of Fraud Charges

Roanoke, Va., July 12 (AP).—All four defendants in the Railway Journal mail fraud case won acquittal today in Western District Federal Court.

Found not guilty by Judge A. D. Barksdale were: Glenn E. Feeney, 1340 Ingraham st. nw., Washington, publisher of the Railway Journal; Keen P. Newcomb of Atlanta; Craig P. Gilbert of Salisbury, N. C., and A. C. McIntosh of Charlotte, N. C.

McIntosh was found not guilty on the motion of District Attorney Howard Gilmer.

In passing judgment, Judge Barksdale said he did not doubt that Newcomb had perpetrated a fraud in selling advertising in the magazine to Roanoke businessmen. But, he said, the Government had proved only a local and private fraud via telephone—not a mail fraud.

ACREAGE, SALE 75

ACREAGE—ACREAGE—ACREAGE

Would you like to know the man who has made more fortunes in acreage than any other man in Washington? Mr. Charles C. Glover, late president of the Riggs Nat'l Bank. He was a farm boy from one of the Carolinas. He sought employment in the old Corcoran & Riggs Bank and made good. And it was through his ability he formed the Riggs Nat'l Bank. He was not only the most successful buyer of acreage but he was successful in everything. I bought acreage from Mr. Glover in Chevy Chase at $3000 per acre that he bought at $70 an acre and now some of that same land after I developed it is worth a million per acre. When I was building Chevy Chase, D. C., I received continuous letters from a man who wanted to sell me land in Bethesda, which is now the shopping center, at $500 per acre and it's now worth a million an acre. I knew this land was cheap at $500 per acre at the time, but I had my hands full with Chevy Chase. Now I have some other acreage farther out. One is gone and I believe it will become a shopping center some day. This acreage is where the Bradley & River Roads merge together overlooking the Congressional Country Club and this ground is now a great traffic center and where a traffic center comes shopping centers usually come. I have about a mile and half front on River & Bradley Roads in other words all front, only about 62 acres left. I am building my own home on the other. My home fronts River Road right opposite the entrance to the Congress. C. C. This hill is the finest setting for a home in this part of the U. S. It is a far more beautiful setting than the White House where Mr. Truman lives. I am in my 84th year. I'm settling my own estate; you can have the remainder of this acreage at 15c per sq. ft. if you take it all. I believe it will be worth a million in time. River and Bradley Roads form 2 of the most important gateways to Washington. To give you an idea of what these gateways mean, the three gateways on the Va. end of our 3 great bridges, all of that land and the shopping centers, all of it is worth a million per acre. Do a little thinking, use your head and see if you can't make a fortune out of acreage. You can reach me at

The War Correspondents

War was almost a private affair between two countries 50 years ago. No one else was much interested . . . The murder of the Archduke in Serbia in 1914, which started off the First World War, was carried on Page 2 of the country's metropolitan journals and ignored in the lesser cities. It proved to be the headline-maker of three years later, and since then the world has never stopped following the game of life and death that is called diplomacy and war . . . Where local coverage was all that was necessary, now thousands of places far beyond our borders determine the safety of the innermost hamlet in America.

The stakes are so high that the life of every living person is involved. Yet he has absolutely no control . . . It is like watching someone else betting all of your possessions at a roulette game far across the room. The function of the war correspondent is to tell you how your gamble is going.

War reporting becomes more hazardous with each succeeding holocaust . . . Only two newsmen were injured during the initial World War. The casualty list of World War II included more than a score of correspondents. But when the Korean war was only 15 days old—three reporters were wounded and two killed.

Spunk is naturally a war reporting requirement . . . Floyd Gibbons was among the most famed of the daredeviling correspondents. Soon after World War I exploded Gibbons went to England . . . He had so much faith in his hunch that the ship would be torpedoed Floyd equipped himself with a special life-preserver, flashlight and a flask of brandy . . . Sure enough, the ship was torpedoed, and Gibbons came up with a page oneder.

British newsman K. S. Watson joined the Loyalists as a soldier while covering the Spanish Civil War . . . He fought on the Aragon front but rushed back every few days to Barcelona to file his stories.

Richard Tregaskis, the INS ace (author of "Guadalcanal Dary"), is 6 ft. 7 in.—twice the size of the average man and twice as good as the average war writer.

Cecil Brown went down in history books the hard way. His adventures covering the war included being blown off two warships now rustjng on the Pacific's bottom.

Remember General Stilwell's tortuous retreat through the jungles of Burma? The grueling march wilted many sturdy soldiers . . . And among those who accompanied Stilwell and his men was pretty newsgal Betty Graham.

When newscasting ace Bill Shirer was covering Berlin he came across this story: The BBC in London broadcast the name of a captured Nazi flier . . . Eight German mothers who heard the broadcast sent letters to the captured airman's mother telling her the news . . . But she turned the missives over to the Gestapo, who arrested the eight mothers for listening to foreign broadcasts.

When Shirer attempted to use the yarn on his broadcast the Nazi nonsensor deleted it on the ground "that American mothers would not understand the heroism of the airman's mother"!

INS's Clark Lee (one of the top World War II newsboys) described his job as "damn hard work, up to 18 hours a day."

Godfrey Tries to Keep His Family Out of Limelight

(Fifth of a Series.)

By Jack O'Brian

Little has been written about family and close personal life Arthur Godfrey until this se- s for one very definite reason: Godfrey, while deeply proud f his wife, three children and his farm, livestock and the usual personal possessions, is hesitant about bringing them into full public focus.

"They might get bothered, and the kids might get spoiled," he said, with quiet sincerity.

"They're all normal, everyday people like you or anyone's folks, and I don't want them ever to change."

Godfrey, therefore, keeps his wife, Mary; Richard, a 19-year-old son by a previous marriage; his young son and daughter who go to public school in Virginia—and his mother here in Manhattan—away from the dizzy distractions of the dervish radio and television whirl in which he spends just about half his time—the public half.

The entirely private half is spent with his family on his 800-acre farm at Catoctin Ridge, Loudoun County, Va.

Farm Turns Profit

Fine cattle, horses, well-tended crops and all sorts of farm products are carefully nurtured with such efficiency that the farm each year turns a profit. Last year it was $12,000, certainly not much in comparison with Godfrey's one-million-dollar-a-year income from radio and TV, but more than enough to take him out of the amateur class.

"If anything ever should happen to my other interests, and I could pay all my attention to my farm, I could double that income," he said last week, with more than a touch of pride.

This Manhattan-born farmer cuts away from all the New York razzle-dazzle every Thursday morning directly he is finished with his morning program at CBS.

Promptly as it goes off the air, Godfrey strides swiftly out a backstage entrance of the studio into a car and speeds to Teterboro Airport, N. J.

With him is "Mug" Richardson, his general manager, chief of production, executive assistant, "my good right arm."

Along for the weekend ride usually is some other close associate; last week it was Archie Bleyer, Godfrey's orchestra leader on all his shows, just one of the many professional associates of the lovable redhead who changed a strictly business relationship to one of abject loyalty, sincere friendship, virtually family-style affection.

At Teterboro Airport, all gassed, oiled and ready for him to step behind the stick, is a Navion four-seater private plane. No delays, usually, and they're winging toward Washington.

In Washington, "Mug" Richardson says so long and leaves for her own apartment. She has only the final Friday morning show to go, and Thursday afternoon and evening is free for anything she wishes. As "Miss North Carolina" of 1934 Miss Richardson does not go dateless, never fear. And after 16 harried years with Godfrey, she still is one of the handsomest girls anywhere.

He's All-Out Relaxer

While "Mug" goes to her flat and her own way, Godfrey wastes no time getting to his rich acreage. Once there he relaxes completely. And may we add, that when Godfrey relaxes, he relaxes as completely as he works. That is as near to the impossible as I ever expect to see.

A big lunch awaits him, overseen by his wife, a lovely blonde young woman to whom he's been married since 1938. They have lots to talk about, and the lunch is long, loaded with fine family chatter about the kids, the cows, the kittens, the kids, and then the kids some more.

The "kids" are daughter Pat, 7, and Son Mike, 9, about as unspoiled a brace of celebrity offspring as can be located anywhere.

At Godfrey's insistence, they attend public school. They engage in all community activities, have a natural love for the farm and outdoor things encouraged without insistence. They are growing up just as almost any well-fixed farm parents might raise their children.

Once the initial family problems are talked away, Godfrey climbs into corduroy and wool shirt and makes his farm rounds.

There always are new colts, new cattle, or a Brahma bull to cross-breed experimentally with domestic cows. Godfrey tramps his land, keeps careful watch of new installations or old items that need attention, checks grazing stock, scrupulously investigates his barns, silos, henhouses.

By afternoon, his kids are home from school to change into play duds and go chasing after their pop. It's a joyous, profitable romp for the rest of the day, and to bed after dinner at a proper time for all.

Master of Underplaying

Next morning Arthur sleeps until almost time for his 10:15 radio show. "Mug" Richardson arrives to check the "script," or what passes for script on any Godfrey show. Mostly it consists of piles of carefully culled comments written in the Godfrey style by several "writers," who actually are mere collectors of the proper sort of newspaper story or anecdote that fits Godfrey's fancy.

Frequently a "writer" bothers to dash off a punchline for Arthur which under other auspices might delight a comedy star. But generally the sketchy background matter injected by Godfrey is of such hilarious moment that Arthur makes more than the most out of it before it reaches its supposed climax.

Having once attained uproarious response with such a joke or situation the redhead prefers not to press his luck and try for the big prize.

He is a master of underplaying. He senses when several leading-up laughs are plenty, when that big final yell of laughter might put him in the Broadway comedian field. He does not wish to attain that—ever.

He therefore tosses aside many a carefully polished comedy gem, completely satisfied with the appreciation extracted in low-pressure style.

That's Godfrey.

"Mug" Richardson also is a past master at selecting such items for Godfrey's attention while on the air. Many times he has no more idea of what he is going to talk about than his listeners. What comes out has a high level of friendly hilarity. It's not accident, by any means, but long habit, a style of presentation that is easier on the nerves than jokes pressure-cooked out of Joe Miller's by dint of painful, ulcer-wracked labors.

Godfrey broadcasts from his farmhouse studio each Friday without benefit of his orchestra and singers being there to let him know visually what's going on. Janette Davis, his pretty girl singer, and Bill Lawrence, a bobby-sox favorite, both discovered by Godfrey and brought along to handsome paychecks on his shows, always are in the CBS studios in New York.

Arthur, with earphones bringing him in contact with the Manhattan center of activities, synchronizes his voice to the music that trickles to him by telephone wire.

The Mariners Quartet, also featured on his various shows, once were playing a benefit engagement at South Bend, Ind., and Archie Bleyer's orchestra was in New York. The impish Godfrey thought it would be fun for him to sing from his Virginia farm, with Bleyer's baton leading the band in New York and the Mariners chiming in from the most distant background in most people's memories—from a stage in a South Bend theatre.

Everything came out fine. The song was "A Million Tomorrows," but the engineers spread thus around the country hoping the trick would come off properly, would have settled for just one single tomorrow—right then.

24-Hour Heavens

Once the Friday show is out of the way, Godfrey settles down to a weekend of earnest rest and diversion. He chops trees and farms in a fashion that puts his Manhattan half-week entirely out of his mind. Saturday and Sunday are 24-hour heavens.

But as Sunday evening approaches, the Navion is being gassed and oiled in Washington. "Mug" Richardson is powdering and packing or saying so-long-for-now to some anxious young man as she dashes off to the National Airport.

Godfrey finally kisses his wife goodby, tousles the hair of his children, gets into his car and is driven off—for another three-and-a-half days of dizzy, frantic nose-to-the-microphone.

The plane lands at Teterboro again and out steps a thoroughly rested, entirely happy man, refreshed from his brief stay with his loved ones.

The world is Arthur Godfrey's oyster. With a pearl in it.

TOMORROW: Three and a half days in a boiler factory—Arthur Godfrey begins his radio and TV week.

"CARRY ME BACK . . ."—Yes, it's "Old Virginny" time again. Every Thursday morning, after his broadcast, Arthur rushes by car to Teterboro, N. J., airport, hops into his Navion four-seater private plane and is off to his farm

ON THE FARM—Arthur is happy down on the farm—his 800-acre farm at Catoctin Ridge, Loudoun County, Va. Here he has a talk with his son, Mike, about a baby porker. This picture was made in 1947

Godfrey Will Improve His Gift Airport

Leesburg, Va., July 12 (Spl.).—This town is going to get its airport improved $55,000 worth—without spending a penny.

Arthur Godfrey, who is making a gift of the project, is improving the center strip at the port and has discussed putting a recreation center at the airport, according to Mayor Maurice R. Lowenbach.

The mayor told a council meeting this week that work on the project can begin as soon as transfer papers are signed.

D. C. Bureau Expert Taking Isotope Course

Joseph C. Richmond, ceramics engineer of the National Bureau of Standards, is at Oak Ridge, Tenn., studying radioisotope research in his specialty.

He is among 32 scientists enrolled in the 15th series of one-month courses in radioisotope techniques at the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies.

Richmond plans to use radioisotopes to study porcelain enamels and high-temperature ceramic coatings in his work for the Enameled Metals Section, bureau officials said.

U. S. Prisoners Shown In Pyongyang Streets

The Communist North Korean radio reported yesterday that American prisoners of war have been marched down Stalin street in Pyongyang, the North Korean capital.

It said hostile crowds gathered to watch "these beastly imperialist American soldiers" being herded to the Myongchi prison camp. It said the incident occurred Tuesday, and persons lining the road raked the captives with "glances filled with hatred and contempt."

Atomic Story Makes Exciting Listening

By John Crosby

TWO years ago David Lilienthal, then chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, declared: "There is a growing tendency in some quarters to act as if atomic energy were none of the people's business. In my opinion this is nonsense and dangerous nonsense—dangerous to cherished American institutions and for that reason dangerous to genuine national security. If schemers or fools or rascals or hysterical stuffed shirts get this thing out of the people's hands, then it may be too late to find out what it is all about."

Dr. Compton

In an attempt to dispel some of the ignorance and apathy of the "people" toward the atom, NBC (WRC) is producing a series of programs called "The Quick and the Dead," the second of which will be heard tonight at 8, which is a sort of biography of the atom bomb, the hydrogen bomb and atomic energy.

A great many distinguished people have collaborated on this notable effort. The series was written after two months' research by Fred Friendly, the compiler of the record album, "I Can Hear It Now."

Bob Hope has contributed his services in the role of an American taxpayer who would like to find out something about the atomic energy program for which he is footing a healthy portion of the bill. William Laurence, science writer for The New York Times, was assigned the task of putting the atom into language comprehensible to Hope and to the rest of us laymen. Throughout the series are the voices, either their own or those of very skilled impersonators, of President Roosevelt, Winston Churchill, Albert Einstein, Lise Meitner, the first person to split an atom; Father Kleinsorge, the German Jesuit who supplied John Hersey with much of the material for "Hiroshima"; Dr. Karl Compton; Dr. Enrico Fermi; the co-pilot of the B-29 who dropped the bomb on Hiroshima, and many, many others.

'Most Exciting' Whodunit

THE first program last Thursday was the beginning of what Hope very appropriately described as "the most exciting detective story of all time."

Starting with the arrival of the Italian physicist, Fermi, in this country, it showed how Fermi went to the Navy Department to try to interest them in the atom bomb and was ignored. There were flashbacks of Lise Meitner, played by Helen Hayes, being forced out of Germany to Denmark, and of her discovery there that she had unknowingly split the atom.

Then, Laurence continued, the scientist recruited Albert Einstein, played by Paul Lukas, to win the attention and support of President Roosevelt in order to get some official action on the atom bomb. The go-ahead signal was given on December 6, 1941, the day before Pearl Harbor, and the rest of the program is devoted to that dangerous exploration into unknown territory, the building of the first atomic pile under Stagg Field in Chicago. Much of this is fairly familiar stuff, but it is still very exciting dramatic material.

Voice of Neutron Counter

OF ALL the voices heard on the first program, the most compelling was that of a neutron counter, played by a neutron counter, as it recorded, tick by tick, the first self-sustaining chain reaction.

Friendly pulled out all the stops to squeeze the last ounce of drama from the story. Along with a lot of elemental and not-so-elemental physics, he worked in the voices of President Roosevelt during his "day that will live in infamy" speech, of Churchill during his "their finest hour" speech, and a description by Bill Laurence of the first atomic explosion in the New Mexico desert against the background of the most extraordinary sound effects.

It Takes Lot of Roof to Roof a Lot

Tom Beesley of the Dorchester House notes with interest a real estate ad which says, in part: "Slate roof, on a large lot." Muses Tom:

"I wonder why they didn't put the slate roof on the house?"

STREET SCENE

Lawyer John W. "Jack" Brennan was at 15th and Constitution ave. nw. the other day when a Virginia-bound bus pulled up to the curb.

He saw a girl on the bus hand a dollar through the window to the ice-cream vendor on the corner, who promptly delved into his cart to fill the order.

But before the transaction could be completed, the bus took off. The vendor was left with the ice cream in one hand and 90 cents in change in the other.

A motorcycle policeman mounted on steed No. 7 saw the incident, too. Grabbing the ice cream and money, the gallant bluecoat set off in pursuit. He caught the bus at the next corner, and brought the story to a happy ending.

The cop who rides motorcycle No. 7 is our old friend Pvt. Edward L. Cave, the handsome hunk of guy who has been mentioned here before—twice in connection with speed trap complaints from Northeast residents, once for unsuccessfully trying to convince a judge that I went through a changing yellow light, and once for heroic work in capturing some armed bandits.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I'm told that some time ago you explained that it is not against the law to sell hard liquor to a customer who is standing up, or sitting at a counter.

As an authority on drinking rules, perhaps you can tell me whether it's true that milk served in Washington restaurants must be brought to the table in the original container.

Marjorie Beck
Garrett Park, Md.

Dear Marjorie:

The local law formerly provided that milk had to be served in the original container. But Corporation Counsel Vernon West tells me that this rule was later amended to permit restaurant service from bulk dispensers which are approved by the Health Department.

Bulk dispensers are not approved unless they meet rigid requirements regarding cleanliness, and are equipped with a thermostatic control.

On the liquor laws, I'm afraid I've been misquoted. Here's a summary of what I said:

It is generally believed that it is illegal to drink while standing in Washington; that it is illegal to move your drink from one table to another; and that it is illegal to bring your own liquor into a licensed place. There is no legal basis for these myths.

The law says a restaurant may serve whisky only to patrons who are seated at tables. It does not order the patron to remain seated after he is served.

The law says nothing whatever about a patron who chooses to move his drink after it is served. And there is absolutely no legal prohibition against pouring yourself a drink from your own jug, so long as you do it in a licensed place during legal hours.

On the other hand, there's also nothing in the law to prevent a restaurateur from charging you a corkage fee for every bottle that's opened on his premises.

Bill.

Views Vary on Campaign Money

By Drew Pearson

Two Democratic Senators in two widely separated areas appear to have widely divergent views on big campaign contributions:

Kefauver

No. 1 is serious-minded Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee who today opens up a big probe of Florida gambling, including the third of a million dollars pumped into the political kitty of Fuller Warren to elect him Governor of Florida. Warren is a Democrat and so is Kefauver, but the Senator isn't letting that hamper the investigation.

No. 2 is likable, silver-crested Senator Guy Gillette of Iowa, chairman of a Senate committee supposed to investigate big campaign contributions. When the easy-going Gillette is asked too many questions about his probe, he puts on his hat and walks away.

So far this year more big money has been pumped into senatorial primaries than almost any other year in history, both by Democrats and Republicans. But Guy Gillette just doesn't seem anxious to embarrass either party.

Who Elects Governors

Down in Miami, Senator Kefauver's investigation, beginning today, goes to the root of how the gambling rackets have become political rackets. I haven't talked to Kefauver's investigators, but I have made a study of Florida gambling and here is the general picture he will find:

Gambling in the lush winter sporting land of Florida has been divided among three gangs:

a. The old Capone mob under William H. Johnston of Chicago and Jacksonville controls the dog races of the entire State.

b. The S. and G. syndicate, a group of local businessmen, control the bookmaking in Miami and Miami Beach.

c. The New York mob, under Meyer Lansky, an associate of Frankie Costello, operates in Broward County, north of Miami Beach.

In order to preserve the millions in profits raked in from these areas, the gangs subsidize the sheriffs of their counties and even the governor of Florida himself. In fact, when the Chicago gang told the S. and G. syndicate to move over and let them in on part of the Miami bookmaking, the syndicate immediately appealed to the man it had helped elect to office, Dade County Sheriff Jimmy Sullivan.

Falls Back on Governor

Whereupon, the Chicago gang also fell back on the man it had helped elect to office, Gov. Fuller Warren. Dog-racer William Johnston, it developed, had contributed the amazing amount of $154,000 to Warren's primary campaign, despite the fact that it was against the law at that time to contribute more than $5000 per person. After Warren was elected to office, of course, he got the law changed.

Another $154,000 was given and loaned to Warren by Louis E. Wolfson of Jacksonville, also in violation of the $5000 limit.

Governor Warren has now found himself betwixt and between in the war of gamblers, and the Kefauver crime committee wants to find out what the gamblers get in return for their stupendous campaign gifts.

Meanwhile, in another part of the United States, other sizable campaign gifts have been revealed in the good old Republican State of Pennsylvania. This time gamblers were not the contributors, but big manufacturers. Joe Grundy, the famed GOP high-tariff advocate, contributed $94,000 to the Jay Cooke-John-Kunkel campaign in Pennsylvania to defeat Governor Jim Duff, also Republican. Mason Owlett put up $52,000; loaned another $45,000, while his wife gave $3000. W. T. Wright also loaned $156,135 to the Kunkel-Cooke committee.

But in Washington, Senator Gillette did not seem much interested in these big contributions. He sent Fielding Wright, jr., son of the Mississippi Dixiecrat governor, to Pennsylvania to probe the big dough shelled out by the manufacturers, but it was learned that Wright chiefly paid a social call on the Pennsylvania Secretary of State.

Gillette Prefers Scouts

Asked what young Wright had done in Pennsylvania, Gillette said he didn't know.

"Aren't you the chairman?" the Senator was asked.

"Of course, but I don't keep track of every detail," said Gillette, and reached for his hat.

"As a matter of fact," the Senator was reminded, "all Fielding Wright did in Pennsylvania was to pick up the information that was available in the secretary of state's office. You could have gotten just as much by writing a letter."

"No, he got more information than that," insisted Gillette.

"What is Wright's background as an investigator?" the Senator was asked.

"I don't know."

"Didn't you study his qualifications before hiring him?"

"Sure," shot back the Senator, again reaching for his hat.

"Then how much experience has he had?"

"I'm just not going to give you that information."

"Isn't it true that Wright really spends most of his time in the office of Senator Stennis of Mississippi rather than being out in the field investigating campaign expenditures?"

This time the Senator not only got his hat, but ducked through the door and began walking rapidly down the corridor of the Senate Office Building.

"The Senator," explained his assistant, "has to meet some Boy Scouts."

That, perhaps, explains the type of handshaking likable Guy Gillette prefers at a time when as much as $1,500,000 has been spent in one primary to elect a man to a job paying only $12,500. Maybe Gillette thinks Boy Scouts are more important, but the voters, when they finally wake up to what's going on, probably won't.

Michigan Refuses To Send Patterson Back to Alabama

Lansing, Mich., July 12 (U.P.).—Gov. G. Mennen Williams today refused to return Hayward Patterson, last of the "Scottsboro boys," to Alabama for completion of his 75-year prison sentence.

"Simple justice should require that all the convicted men to be punished equally and I can see no justifiable reason for returning Patterson to prison after his fellow defendants have been released," Williams said.

Patterson, arrested here as a Federal fugitive after two years of freedom, faces an extradition hearing in Detroit Thursday. He is free on $5000 bond supplied by the Civil Rights Congress.

The Negro escaped from Montgomery, Ala., State prison in 1948. Patterson and eight other Negroes were charged with raping two white women in a freight train near Scottsboro, Ala., in 1931.

Watch Language! Pilots Told; Lady In B-26 on Hookup

Tokyo, July 12 (U.P.).—American pilots were put under strict censorship today—all because of a woman.

Their usual vivid vocabulary of one-syllable words on their intercommunication radios is out.

They have to talk like gentlemen, now, because a woman was present the last time they aired their views.

Yesterday Miss Charlotte Knight, Salt Lake City, Utah, correspondent for Collier's, went on two combat missions with a B-26.

"I was learning some new words by listening in on all radio conversation," she said. "But this didn't last long. A voice soon came booming over the command channel and warned the fliers to 'watch your language because there's a lady present'."
